TAKES CHARGE AT WAR PLANT

Maj. Harold F. Ogden Named Commanding Officer at Scioto Ordnance Plant.

Major Harold F. Ogden, 45, former commanding officer of the Gulf Ordnance Plant at Aberdeen, Miss., reported for duty yesterday as the new commanding officer of the Scioto Ordnance Plant.

Col. John Huling Jr., whom Major Ogden succeeds as commanding officer, will go on sick leave until the end of September. Col. Huling has been informed he will receive orders soon to report for duty in the field as the ordnance officer of a combat unit.

Major Ogden has been at the Gulf Ordnance Plant since May 6, and prior to that was in the office of the chief of ordnance at Washington, D. C. Before that he was engaged as a civilian in construction work at the Plum Brook Ordnance Works and previous to that worked on a project at Fort Devens at Ayer, Mass.

His home originally was at Melrose, Mass. His wife and two children expect to join him here, within a few days.

Major Ogden is a veteran of the first World war in the 26th and 2nd Divisions, and served 23½ months overseas. He was active in the National Guard in Massachusetts up to 1929 and helped organize the State Guard in 1939.

City Park Relics Move Step Nearer War Scrap Pile

Marion's city park war relics are practically on their way to the hungry scrap heap.

That was the indication today from Mayor Russell C. Snare.

The dire need for scrap to wage the war against the axis has several times been responsible for proposals to scrap the relics, but so far no action has been taken.

If some group doesn't formally request Acting City Solicitor R. M. Wilhelm to draw the necessary legislation for action of city council by the time of its next meeting on Sept. 28, the mayor said he personally would make a request for the legislation and present it to council.

There are tons of vital metals in the park relics, most of them German weapons of World War I. One American Legion member this morning estimated there are five and one-half tons in the McKinley park relic alone. There are relics in all the parks and there are several shells flanking the door to the Legion Dugout.

RAFT FOUND ALONG LONG ISLAND SHORE

Shot Fired in Unsuccessful Effort To Halt Prowler.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—The eastern defense command announced today that a small raft had been found along the Atlantic coast of Long Island last night and that a shot was fired in an unsuccessful attempt to halt a prowler.

An army beach patrol, together with police and coast guard, later searched the vicinity but "discovered nothing unusual."

The announcement said the incident occurred at about 10 p. m., eastern war time.

The text of the announcement follows:

"Last night, Sept. 16, at about 10 p. m., eastern war time, local coast guard patrol on a Long Island beach near the Hamptons found a small raft and reported that a prowler was seen running along the beach in that vicinity.

"A shot was fired in an unsuccessful attempt to halt the prowler. An army beach patrol arrived at the scene within a few minutes. Soldiers, police and coast guard searched the vicinity but discovered nothing unusual."

The "Hamptons" referred to in the announcement are a group of villages on the south shore of Long Island about three-quarters of the distance from New York to the island's tip at Montauk point.

The location is within 25 miles of the point at Amagansett beach where four Nazi saboteurs landed in June. They subsequently were tried with four others, who landed on a Florida beach, by a military commission in Washington. Six of the eight were executed.

State and village police throughout eastern Long Island were busy all morning stopping motorists and requesting identifications from them and their passengers.

Likewise, at least two Long Island railroad trains were boarded by authorities.

TANI NAMED JAP FOREIGN MINISTER

By The Associated Press

TOKYO (FROM JAPANESE BROADCASTS), Sept. 17—Masayuki Tani, 53-year-old career diplomat who has been president of the board of information since General Hideki Tojo became premier 11 months ago, was named foreign minister today.

He took over the post from the premier, who has held it provisionally since the resignation Sept. 1 of Shigenori Togo, and will continue also to head the board of information.

(Tani, belongs to the small foreign office group which from the beginning has supported the army's program of continental expansion at the expense of China. He was one of the original advocates of the "greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere" policy, which, as counselor of the Japanese embassy in Manchukuo from 1933 to 1936, he helped establish.

(His appointment may indicate that consolidation of the "co-prosperity sphere" in the territory already conquered is to be the first principle of Tokyo policy. However, although he has given no clear indication of his attitude toward Russia, his record does not suggest that he would oppose the army if it decided that an attack on Siberia must be made.

(The resignation of Togo, who had been ambassador to Germany as well as to Russia, was widely interpreted in some quarters as clearing the way for abandonment of Japan's neutrality pact with the Soviet and a smash at Siberia.)

GERMANY MASS BOMBED AGAIN

Possible Force of 800 RAF Planes Smash at Nazi Industrial Areas.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 17 — Massed squadrons of possibly 800 RAF bombers unloaded another huge load of explosives upon the industrial heart of Germany last night, striking at the Ruhr in a renewed effort to aid Soviet Russia by crippling Adolf Hitler's war-making machinery.

The massive night blow at the Ruhr, the air ministry disclosed, followed a daring dusk attack by light British bombers on Wiesbaden, in the Rhineland. Wiesbaden is the seat of the German armistice commission that deals with French armistice matters.

The night raid, delivered by "a very strong force of bombers," left many fires burning, some of them very large, the communique said.

39 Planes Lost

British losses in the two air forays were 39 planes, it was announced. If the usual five per cent loss ratio prevailed, the RAF may have sent over as many as 800 planes. An authoritative source said specifically, however, that it was not a 1,000-bomber operation.

The RAF ran its string of night assaults on the reich this month to 10 by this attack.

Spitfire fighters meanwhile intercepted a group of high-flying German daylight raiders over the English channel this morning and turned them back after they had tried three times to cross the British south coast.

Nazis Report Casualties

A German broadcast said several localities in the Rhineland and Westphalia had been bombed with damage to buildings and civilian casualties. It reported that 37 of the British raiders were shot down.

Of the nine previous night attacks which the British have launched against Germany since the first of the month, all save one have been on a major scale and most have involved hundreds of planes.

The targets have included Saarbruecken, Karlsruhe, Duisberg, Frankfurt, Dusseldorf, Wilhelmshaven and Bremen—which was raided twice.

While the RAF was over Germany last night a few Nazi raiders dropped bombs at several places in East Anglia, but official reports said did little damage and caused no casualties.

Sentenced and Fined for Theft Attempt

Russell Messenger, 27, of Caledonia pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in the Columbus workhouse when he was arraigned in municipal court today on a charge of removing auto parts.

He was taken into police custody around midnight Wednesday when caught removing lock nuts from a wheel of an auto parked on Cottage street. He was held for investigation until today when police officials filed the charge.

Charles Hackworth of 481 Thompson street was owner of the car from which Messenger was attempting to remove a wheel.

REPORT BITTER BATTLE RAGING IN NEW GUINEA

Fighting on Lower Slope of Mountains Within 32 Miles of Port Moresby.

By The Associated Press

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA Sept. 17—The main bodies of the allied and Japanese forces in New Guinea were locked in bitter combat today approximately 32 miles airline from Port Moresby following a new enemy advance down the southern slopes of the Owen Stanley mountains.

The scene of the battle was the tiny hamlet of Isurava, which the Japanese reached yesterday after pushing forward eight miles from Efogi, where they had been stalled for a week after crossing the summit of the mountains.

Fighting Severe

A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters said the Japanese were exerting heavy pressure and that "serious fighting" was in progress. There was no indication of the turn it was taking.

It appeared evident, however, that the Japanese had been strongly reinforced during the past week and that they were throwing everything into a determined effort to reach Port Moresby, a vital link in Australia's outer defenses.

An allied spokesman said that despite the rugged nature of the terrain the Japanese had brought up mountain guns and were employing mortars and machineguns as well.

The Japanese advance yesterday brought them into contact for the first time with the main body of the allied forces defending the approaches to Port Moresby, which also has been reinforced during the past week.

Planes Give Support

Allied planes were reported giving the ground forces good support by continually strafing the Japanese from low levels, although the dense jungles provided the enemy with cover which made detection from the air difficult.

General MacArthur's headquarters also announced that allied planes had attacked the Japanese at Buna on the New Guinea east coast, springboard of the present drive, with unobserved results.

Other allied bombers attacked enemy dispersal areas at Rabaul, New Britain, and at Buka, in the northern Solomons, the bulletin said.

BELLE CENTER NAVY PLANE PILOT KILLED

Ensign Longbrake Meets Death on Maneuvers.

Ensign John R. Longbrake, 23, only child of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Longbrake of Belle Center, was killed Tuesday afternoon when a navy plane he piloted crashed near Back Bay, Va., while in routine flight maneuvers.

The Fifth Naval District announcement carried by The Associated Press stated the plane crashed at high speed.

His parents, notified of his death, had received no details of the accident up to noon today.

Ensign Longbrake was born on Nov. 12, 1918, the day after the First World war armistice.

He was graduated from the Belle Center High school in 1936 and from Muskingum college in 1941. On June 15, 1941, a few days after graduating from college, he enlisted for flight training in the naval reserves.

All of his training was at Corpus Christi, Tex., where he received his "wings" last June.

He was assigned to Fighter Squadron No. 9.

The body will be sent to Belle Center for funeral services and burial.

REPORT NAZI SHIP LOSSES

LONDON, Sept. 17—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm today quoted what it called a reliable Norwegian report that 24 German-operated ships were sunk last week off the coast of Norway by allied planes and submarines.

Japanese Lose Heavily in Two New U. S. Assaults

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 Renewed American aerial assaults on Japanese airdromes in the Aleutian and Solomon islands left the enemy today a prey to loss of two ships, damage to five others and three submarines, and 500 more casualties.

In the southwest Pacific where U. S. marines hammered down a third Nipponese attempt to regain Guadalcanal, navy fliers the navy reported that marine and navy aircraft bombed and torpedoed enemy ships south of Choiseul island and damaged two cruisers.

Almost simultaneously the navy and Pacific fleet headquarters told of striking savage new blows in the Aleutians far to the north where army planes sank two Japanese mine sweepers, damaged three submarines, three large cargo ships and "several small craft," killed or wounded an estimated 500 troops, shot down six planes and fired storehouses and supply dumps.

First Report Since Aug. 22

The big Aleutians raid, centering about Kiska harbor, was first Monday, the navy disclosed, since August 22.

YORKTOWN SKIPPER

The navy department has cited Captain Elliott Buckmaster (above), skipper of the ill-fated U. S. S. Yorktown, for his brilliant handling of the carrier prior to its being fatally damaged by Japanese torpedo hits during the battle of Midway. Captain Buckmaster is a resident of Columbus, O. ## Davis Declares Petrillo's Ban On Recordings Endangers U. S. Security

War Information Director First Witness at Hearing on Music Union Head's Anti-Record Order.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—Elmer Davis, director of the office of war information, told a congressional committee today that James C. Petrillo's ban against musical records and transcriptions threatened the wartime national system of communication.

Davis was the first witness before a senate interstate commerce subcommittee hearing called to determine the effect on public morale of the order by Petrillo, the president of the American Federation of Musicians, forbidding union musicians to make records and transcriptions for radio stations and coin-operated phonographs.

This order, Davis testified, had the effect of halting the making of records necessary to the keeping of audiences by upwards of 150 radio stations.

"A policy which threatens the continued existence of many of these stations is injurious to the national system of communication, and may seriously hamper the work for which this office (of war information) was established, of informing the people about the status and progress of the war effort and the war policies, activities and aims of this government."

Petrillo has contended that the use of "canned music" meant loss of employment for musicians.

Davis said also he had been advised the "juke box" playing of recordings was a source of entertainment for troops in and out of the country.

He is not concerned, he said, with individual stations or proprietors of institutions in which juke boxes are located, against whom Mr. Petrillo may have a grievance.

"Our concern," Davis continued, "is principally with the national interest in maintaining the broadest possible system of radio station communication; and secondly with the persons with whom Mr. Petrillo has no dispute at all, who are adversely affected by this ruling: the broadcasting station located far from the sources of supply of available musical talent and in no economic position to serve without recordings; the operator of the candy store across the street from an army post, the USO hut in Alaska—all these places, and the people they serve, who are dependent on recorded music."

MOBILIZATION TEST 'RATHER SUCCESSFUL'

Aerial Bombs Used as Signal for Blackout.

Marion's first mobilization to test the effectiveness of aerial bombs as blackout signals, staged last night by the civilian defense organization, was "rather successful," Assistant Coordinator W. E. Orcutt said this morning.

Unit chiefs were called from the police station telephones at 7.

At 7:30 men from the signal unit, their watches synchronized, started setting off the 18 aerial bombs at scattered spots throughout the city.

The "all clear" signal, the blowing of factory whistles, started at 7:45.

By 7:50 when the blackout signal was given mobilization reports from all sections were virtually complete, Mr. Orcutt said.

The "all clear" signal also was improved last night, the assistant coordinator reported.

Mr. Orcutt was in charge in the absence from the city of the coordinator, William R. Martin.

Plans for the next test mobilization will be announced by Mr. Martin.

Southwestern Limited Wrecked in Ashmore, Ill.

By The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, Ill., Sept. 17—Three trainmen were killed and an undetermined number of persons were injured yesterday when the Southwestern limited passenger train apparently went through an open switch near Ashmore, Ill., and crashed into a train of oil tank cars. Coroner C. Clark of Coles county identified the dead as Thomas Cain, about 70, and J. D. Hooten, the limited's engineer and fireman, respectively, both of Indianapolis, and Wilbur W. Watjen, 26, a railway express messenger of Monroe City, Ind.

The westbound Southwestern Limited train which figured in the accident goes through Marion daily and is due here at 9:35 a. m. Yesterday one or two passengers boarded the train here, it was reported at Union Station.

CORN SHOW QUEEN PICKED AT BUCYRUS

Rosemary Haala Chosen by 3 Marion Judges.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, O., Sept. 16—Rosemary Haala, 16-year-old drum majorette of the Bucyrus High school band, was selected to reign as queen of the fifth annual Crawford county corn show Sept. 24-26 when the 11 candidates for the honor appeared in a review last night before three Marion judges.

The winner, a senior in the high school and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Haale, was selected by Supt. E. E. Holt of the Marion public schools, Robert Mason of Station WMRN and Robert White of the National City bank of Marion. She is a tall brunette.

Attendants to the queen will be the candidates who appeared in last night's program. All were selected by popular vote of their classmates in city and county schools.

The crown will be placed by Miss Betty Steffen, 1941 blond Corn Queen and queens of former years will have a part in the pageant, to be held at Lane street athletic field.

MASSED TANKS OPEN WAY FOR ENTRY TO CITY

Moscow Reports Enemy Maintains Advance Despite Heavy Losses.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 — German and Russian infantrymen battled in the attics and cellars of a northwestern section of Stalingrad today after the gates of the city finally had been opened to the invaders by massed tanks.

Bombs rained down without a letup upon the defending army—made up of soldiers, Red marines and armed civilians—and buildings within the smoking Volga city as waves of Nazi dive bombers hurled themselves into the assault.

It was apparent from field dispatches that the German air force held a clear numerical superiority and was hard for Soviet fliers to meet.

The Moscow radio announced the invaders were maintaining their advance, despite thousands of casualties.

Successful defensive actions were claimed by the Soviet information bureau's midday communique a few hours later, however, and Russian field dispatches in no way intimated that the fighting was lessened or that the city was falling.

"In the northwestern outskirts of Stalingrad, enemy automatic riflemen supported by tanks were repulsed by a Soviet infantry unit," the communique said.

On other sectors of the Stalingrad defense zone hand to hand fighting developed frequently.

Fight from Houses

Furious fighting was reported in the northwestern section, with the Germans swarming into every house they could seize.

They fired from attics and cellars, a dispatch said, but the Red army men ejected them from many.

Dispatches left no doubt that the German air force was raining bombs continually upon the weary Russian fighters, capitalizing on a numerical superiority seldom if ever before attained in the German-Russian war.

The army newspaper Red Star said the sky over the city was swarming with both dive-bombers and high level squadrons and declared that the fate of the town depended upon the skill and courage of the available Soviet fighter pilots, who were credited with shooting down 32 planes yesterday.

German planes were reported previously to have been rushed from many distant sectors, including North Africa, for the assault and the government newspaper Izvestia said documents found in the ruins of a downed Junkers transport showed that it had been flown to Stalingrad from the Netherlands.

Huge Force Massed

Several hundred thousand troops were declared by Izvestia to have been concentrated by the German command for the push that broke into the outskirts.

Transport planes brought up fresh forces and poured them into the battle. Plane landings this close to the front indicated the Germans were able to establish landing fields immediately outside the city.

Red Star said 5,000 Germans were killed during a counterattack in the Sinyavino area of the Volkhov river front and fighting flamed on the central front, in the upper Don basin and along the Terek river valley of the Caucasus.

Major attention, however, was commanded by the battle of Stalingrad.

"The enemy is sustaining enormous losses," the Soviet radio said, "but is still pressing forward."

Reds Wipe Out Force

German tank groups were reported earlier to have cut into Red army lines on the northwestern fringes of the Soviet nerve center only to suffer extinction at the hands of Russian gunners and grenadiers still striking back powerfully in the 24th day of a fight to the death.

The admission that armored detachments of Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock's siege forces were hard upon the northwestern outskirts was contained in the midnight communique, even though it emphasized the repulse of attacks.

(The Germans said there was street fighting deep in the city. The Berlin propaganda ministry was quoted in a dispatch relayed via Zurich, Switzerland, late yesterday as saying that Adolf Hitler's headquarters would issue a special announcement—expected to deal with Stalingrad—within 24 hours.)

A change of pressure was noted in the Nazi assault tactics in the sweep against the city from the northwest, for recent emphasis had been upon the west and southwestern fronts.

Farmer Wickard Helps with the Chores

Wide World Features

CAMDEN, Ind. — Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture, not only preaches that "food will win the war"—he helps produce it on his fertile 380-acre Indiana farm.

His father, Andrew Jackson Wickard, and his daughter, Ann, a Purdue university sophomore, are running the farm while he devotes himself to leading America's army of the soil in the greatest food production program the world has yet seen.

But the cabinet member manages to look on his "Fair Acres" farm near here once in a while. On these occasions he slips into overalls and takes a turn at the chores himself.

Dons Overhalls

Wickard and corn-planting time arrived together at "Fair Acres" this year. He promptly donned a pair of patched overalls, found his worn felt hat on the peg where he had left it, and jumped back in the harness he loves.

He climbed aboard a tractor to plant corn and soy beans—both crops vital to the war program. He fed the hogs. One day he drove his truck to Camden, his official home town, for a load of feed.

The corn and feed were for Wickard's 600 head of Hampshire hogs, from which he'll fill his pork production quota. The soy bean crop, substantially larger this year than in pre-war 1941, will go into plastics for airplanes and war workers' helmets, glues for the navy to use in laminating hulls and decks of mosquito boats, and oils, both edible and for paints.

He found his herd of Angus and shorthorn cattle were fattening nicely. Because repair parts are harder to get, he overhauled his two tractors and found them in tiptop shape.

A full afternoon was spent with daughter Ann in going over the books, so he explained, so "we know where we stand." Together they worked out next year's farm plan, checking off fields that will need ground limestone and also planned crop rotation.

Mrs. Wickard Busy

Mrs. Wickard, also, kept busy during the three-day stay. She fed the chickens, baked a few of the secretary's favorite pies and packed a large, home-cured ham to carry back to their Washington home. Betty, the Wickards' other child, a 1940 graduate of Purdue university, also busied herself with light chores.

The corn planting done, the Wickards boarded a train for their 14-hour jaunt back to Washington. The secretary-farmer of "Fair Acres" had acquired a new coat of tan and a few aching muscles, but he felt more fit to resume his task of supervising the nation's food production.

Said Wickard, "Food, good food and plenty of it is one of the best munitions for democracy that I know. Let's have plenty of it to spread the gospel when the time comes, and let's tell Europe's millions meanwhile that we're ready to help them rout — once they get rid of the Nazis."

OIL HEATED HOMES WILL BE CHILLY

Average Temperature of 65 Degrees Ordered.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—Residents of Ohio and 29 other eastern and middle western states who depend on oil for heat face the prospect of "uncomfortably cold homes" this winter.

This warning came last night from Price Administrator Leon Henderson, who urged householders to "take out the oil burner and put in coal."

"The oil situation is so critical that there simply won't be enough to keep people warm in oil-heated homes," he said.

Henderson disclosed that the fuel oil rationing program in the area will be geared to a daytime temperature of 65 degrees under average weather conditions, compared with temperatures of 70 to 72 degrees maintained in most homes.

"If poor insulation and poor oil burner efficiency make it impossible to maintain the 65-degree temperature with this amount of oil, the householder is expected to cut down the heat loss rather than burn more oil," Henderson declared.

OPA said the average householder "until and including Sept. 30" may purchase up to 275 gallons without using coupons and that starting Oct. 1 he may buy oil if he agrees to surrender the necessary number of coupons when they become available. Ration books will be tailored to fit the individual's needs, with actual rationing beginning as soon as coupon books are available, probably about Oct. 15, OPA said.

WITNESS THREATENED SHE SAYS IN COURT

Girl Claims Clevelander Brandished Knife.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17 — Attractive 21-year-old Joyce Foley, government witness today in the white slave trial of four men and a woman, testified that Louis Peter Morel frequently brandished a knife and "threatened if I left him that he'd scar me up so no other man ever would want me."

The former prostitute also declared that the 51-year-old Clevelander—a defendant in what prosecutors declare was a five-state ring—constantly complained she wasn't making him enough money.

Miss Foley said she met Morel six years ago while in junior high school; that he induced her to live with him and become a prostitute in return for his payment of a $500 hospital bill three years ago. Then, she continued, she worked as a "call girl" for him in Cleveland; at a house operated by "Myrtle Crosby" in Sandusky; at an Akron place; at a house operated by Vera Sill, alias Vera Miller, in Lorain; at Sadie Cook's place in Canton; at a house in Zanesville, and finally as a "call girl" in New York City for "Polly Adler," who operated from "a penthouse—a very nice place."

In New York, the witness declared after taking the stand late yesterday, she worked with Joan Johnson, wife of Jack Johnson, 38, Amsterdam, N. Y., another of those indicted. Although she gave Morel her earnings, Miss Foley declared, he always said it wasn't enough. When she came back to Cleveland from New York for a visit last Easter, "he wasn't satisfied with the money and said we didn't have our minds on our business and were fooling around," Miss Foley continued, adding that after the argument, "he decided I should go back to New York and he'd give me one more chance there."

Her New York earnings ran about $600 weekly, of which she testified half went to "Polly Adler" and the other half to Morel. Late last spring, she added, she finally made good her threats to leave Morel.

Miss Foley said her longest stays were in Lorain and Canton, and that arrangements for her to go to New York were made at the Green Castle barbecue in Canton by Morel and two others. Once, she declared, Morel complained, "'Every time I send you to a place where you can make some money, you don't stay there,' and he called me 'a lazy bum.'"

Morel, Johnson, Veri Sill, and Carl Theodore Bruell and Frank Bruell of Canton are the defendants. Operations are alleged also in Saratoga Springs and Glen Falls, N. Y., Meadville, Pa., Miami, Fla., and Little Rock, Ark.

The speed and pitch of the propeller of a motor driven ship recently built in Sweden for deep sea surveying can be controlled from the bridge to make the vessel virtually vibrationless.

CHAPTER 22.
End of the Trail.

"THE air is bracing on this peak," Tyra said. "It will be a good place to camp while Helen gets back her strength. Are you looking at the plateau, Sandy? What are you seeing?"

Sandy put his glasses aside and turned towards her, smiling a little.

"I'm seeing visions, Tyra. Do you ever see visions?"

She appeared uncertain about how to take his mood. "I don't do. Day-dreams they're sometimes called, aren't they?"

"Yes . . ." Sandy picked up one of her hands and traced the lines of the palm as if he were reading them. After a moment he went on, "I think I followed you, from the first, because I knew that I couldn't do without you."

She said softly, "Then both of us were—sort of blind."

Sandy lifted his head to look into her face. "I wonder what would have happened if I hadn't followed you into this Forbidden Land."

He felt the slight shudder that passed over her body. "Don't even think of it!"

"No, because that's part of the past and we can turn our backs on it and face the future." With one arm he drew her close to his side and pointed with his free hand to the undulating bush country spread like a colossal map below them. "There it is—the world. From now on whatever it does to us we'll take standing side by side, like this."

They turned from the scene toward each other. Their eyes spoke but it was a moment before their lips moved.

"Dear," Sandy said.

"I love you," Tyra whispered, like a pledge.

He held her more tightly and her slender arms stole up around his shoulders drawing his head down to the sweetness of her lips.

They lolled in deep cane chairs in McIntyre's patio—Fleming, Helen, Gil, Sandy and Tyra. They were all freshly bathed and combed. The men were white drill, the women light, thin dresses that made their browned skins browner. In their hands they all held tall glasses that tinkled coolly at every motion. Before them, on a table, lay an odd-looking manuscript, stiff and cracked, but legible.

Sandy and Fleming told their stories. McIntyre listened without interruption, only his singular brows working from time to time to show his emotion.

Now he shifted his huge bulk and grunted—"Uh-uh—quite an experience. And if you don't mind my saying so, you're all damn' lucky to be alive. Of course, I'm glad to have the mystery of the Forbidden Land cleared up, although I don't have any idea it'll help the Indians much. I can see that you've—ah—made a real contribution to science, too. Morse, and I don't believe, Fleming, you need to worry about anybody going after your gold cache. It'll be there fifty years from now—or five hundred."

"I may go back, some day," Fleming said. "But right now there are other things to occupy my time."

Helen spoke up quickly, Mr. Fleming is accompanying my next expedition."

"Uh!" croaked McIntyre. "Starting another? When? Where?"

Helen glanced across at Sandy and when he nodded, she addressed McIntyre. "Tomorrow we're all taking the train to Mexico City and, while Sandy and Tyra are having their honeymoon, Gil, Fleming and I will be getting our outfit ready. We're going up into Sonora. We want to find the mummies of a race of giants that are said to be there."

McIntyre intoned, "You folks are fiends for punishment, that's all I've got to say. From the frying pan into the fire, uh!"

THE END.

Gen. Hershey's Verbal Offensive

MAJ. GEN. LEWIS B. HERSHEY'S speaking engagements and press interviews are not entirely his own business. He is in charge of selective service, which is the touchiest public business there is right now. To be frank about it, Gen. Hershey talks too much.

Everything he says is pounced upon for hidden meaning. As he himself says, he has had trouble as a prophet. That raises the question of why he should keep on trying. Unless he has been acting under orders, no one expects him to try to out-guess the Axis and his own government to boot.

A good many years ago, when it became troublesome for the White House to clear up misunderstandings of its own statements, the scheme of having a spokesman was devised. Then if the spokesman was misunderstood, the confusion could be straightened out by a superior authority.

If Gen. Hershey must keep on talking and getting into trouble about it, the least he can do is let his views be expressed first by someone else. Then if something happens to get misinterpreted, he can set things right. It wouldn't be a perfect plan, but it would be a whole of a lot better than having the general seem to argue with himself at regular intervals. Selective service is too sensitive a subject to be manhandled by its own head man.

Americans Dislike Coddling

PUBLIC opinion polls universally reveal a lag between government action and popular demand for action. The government has been following, not leading, its citizens. They have wanted it to deal forthrightly with the rubber crisis, conscription, Japanese aggression, rearmament and rationing long before anything was done.

There has been too much attention in Washington to the political effect of measures, too much worry about preparing public opinion for shocks lest the shock produce repercussions at the polls. The federal government, controlled by a coalition claiming to be the special friend of the common man, has been singularly lacking in faith in the common man's ability to see things straight. Government spokesmen until recently have been coddling the people into what the people knew was going to be one of the grimmest experiences in history. There has been a surplus of skepticism in the government about the mental stability of the ordinary American and his ability to take it without going to pieces.

Skepticism can go too far when turned loose in the wrong place. This government needed more skepticism when it was appeasing Japan. It needs less skepticism now when it is depending on its citizens to overcome the tragic consequences of that mistake. At least part of the lack of popular confidence in its own organization for prosecuting the war is a reflection of its own lack of confidence in its citizens. They don't want to be coddled; they instinctively distrust a government that insults their intelligence by adopting a coddling policy in wartime.

Bomb in Oregon

A JAPANESE bomb in the wilds of Oregon, which should be sensational isn't—and neither were Japanese shells plunking into United States soil previously. This is because no one needs to be told that the danger from direct, frontal attack still is negligible, but that the danger of the enemy capturing bases from which serious attacks could be launched later is this country's most urgent concern. What happens on the steppes of Russia, on the surface of the Pacific ocean, in Great Britain and South America is a thousand times more important than the ability of the Japanese to sneak up close enough with an airplane to drop a bomb or two in a woods in Oregon. Even the isolationists who used to argue that it wasn't time to worry until our own territory was attacked know that now.

Benefits of R.O.T.C.

MILITARY training which has been in effect in most state universities and many other colleges passed almost unnoticed during peacetime but it is now paying dividends.

In some schools military training was compulsory and in others it was optional. Occasionally persons of pacific tendencies complained that the schools were militarizing our youths. Now most Americans wish that more had been militarized in this way.

The volunteer or draftee with collegiate training in the fundamentals of soldiering goes into active service a step ahead of the one who has not had its advantages. He knows the meaning of the commands, he attracts attention by his familiarity with military courtesy and he is in line for the stripes of a noncommissioned officer and thence to the gold bars of an officer.

Now and in the future military training in schools and colleges must be looked upon as one of the best ways of getting the youth of the country ready for service if it is needed.

News Behind the News

Complicated Phrases Make It Difficult To Understand Farm Price Controversy.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—The storm battle of farm price stabilization moves warmer, wholly concealed from public view by a mass of such impenetrable phrases as "farm-wage parity," "and or the highest prices since Jan. 1," "109 per cent parity loans" and such. The President's speech sounded to all, save the few who can read the double and triple meanings of these terms, as if he wanted to freeze farm prices where they are now.

The farm bloc rose in righteous anger as if he were proposing something even more drastic to the prices. They acted as if he wanted to cut them down. The Steagall bloc in the House is now currently on a rampage against the Senate bill, pretending it would cut the farmer from what he should have.

The whole controversy is being conducted in a way to keep the public oblivious of the fact that all their proposals—the President's, the Senate's and Steagall's—would actually increase current farm prices.

Fancy Verbiage

You never dig over this until you cut your way through the fancy verbiage of the controversy and ascertain the precise effect of this proposed "stabilization" on each basic commodity price now.

The official authority, the bureau of economics in the agriculture department, will tell you, upon inquiry, that cotton was 96 per cent of parity Aug. 15, the date last computed. Tobacco sold at prices then ranging from 121 per cent of parity, for flue cured, to 135 per cent for Maryland and 168 per cent for Georgia and Florida. Wheat was 71 per cent of parity; corn 85 per cent; rice around 125 per cent; hogs were 128 per cent; beef 137 per cent; veal 126 per cent; lamb 135 per cent; sheep 82 per cent; Your butcher bill.

The average of all farm products Aug. 15 was about 107 per cent of parity.

Parity Proposals

The proposal of Mr. Roosevelt, the Senate, and Steagall all are designed, primarily, they say, to establish "parity." But you can readily see from the above list that practically everything except cotton, wheat, corn and sheep already is above the goal that they profess primarily to seek. Their proposals would have the effect, therefore, of moving cotton, wheat, corn and sheep up to parity — increasing these current prices as much as 18 per cent above Aug. 15 levels in the case of sheep.

As wheat, corn and cotton are the largest crops of the nation, the pending legislation is not primarily a price stabilization for them, but a price increase bill.

None To Be Cut

But, you may ask, does the legislation mean a reduction in the other farm prices now away above parity? Oh, No! No prices will be cut. There is a second provision in all the proposals (one of those "and or's") which says the President must fix for the other commodities—not the parity price, not even the current price, but the highest price that has prevailed since Jan. 1.

All grains were at their highest point last March. At 122 per cent of parity. Cotton and cottonseed were at 159 per cent in May. Any proposal now pending would cause the maximum prices to be fixed at these former highest levels of the year.

As a whole, the basic agreed terms would increase farm prices from 107 per cent, Aug. 15, up to about 116 per cent in other words, a nine per cent further increase in farm prices will actually be the effect of this legislation, which they are all calling a price stabilization bill.

So while the battle wages thickly and the words stretch high and long, legislation actually seems to offer more comfort to the farmer than the housewife, or to the husband who pays the grocery bills. No one seems ever to mention that.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — After 57 days' incubation, during which male and female birds took turns in sitting on a sizable egg, the San Diego zoo boasts a fledgling condor. It is believed to be the first ever hatched in captivity in this country and when it grows up may attain a wing spread of six to twelve feet.

Rommel No Genius

By Robert Ruark.

(Passed by Censors)

MARSHALL ERWIN ROMMEL'S current setbacks in Egypt are partially explainable by remarks made by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., just after he returned from active duty on the Libyan front.

Lodge, a reserve major who had volunteered for a look-see at Libya, came back to Washington when the world was bowing low to Rommel's military genius. Tobruk had just fallen, and there was a trend to compare the Nazi marshal with everybody from Hannibal to Napoleon. Lodge, who had been dive-bombed, strafed and generally harried by Rommel's Afrika Korps, couldn't see it that way.

"He's a good general," the tall Massachusetts senator said. "But he's no all-time genius ..No Napoleon. What he is is a hellishly capable professional. And I mean professional in all its senses ....Adaptable to immediate circumstances and an amazing opportunist.

"Rommel never put all his eggs in one basket. He never made up his mind inflexibly to do or die with one specific move. He never fully committed himself to any prescribed tactic.

"Rommel would start several thrusts at once, and throw his strength into whichever seemed to be progressing most favorably. He picked his holes like a good smart football player, and dived into the likeliest with everything he had.

"In the Libyan campaign Rommel's ace was that the British never knew where he was or what to expect next. He'd throw up some tanks there, some smoke over there, some planes here, and then bang home in the confusion. His advantage was that he wasn't trying to storm prepared positions. That is one of the chief differences between the Libyan and Egyptian campaigns.

"IN EGYPT right now we've got a pretty fair idea of where Rommel is and what he's doing. And he is doing the things he likes least....storming that prepared position. In Libya he rarely stormed. He preferred to infiltrate around his objective, cut off supplies and water, and make his movement when the British were thoroughly weakened."

Lodge says that much of Rommel's Libyan success was directly attributable to the click-clack smoothness with which his general staff work ran along. "The mark of the professional again," Lodge says. "Rommel's organization was the type bred only by long and scientific preparation for a certain job."

Rommel's earlier successes also were traceable to his adeptness with his armored corps. The German marshal didn't divide the strength of his mechanized might, throwing sections here and sections there.

"Wherever he was," Lodge said, "he was superior. He kept his two armored divisions and his motorized infantry tightly welded as a unit and made the most of it."

Rommel developed an amazingly sharp device for detecting enemy mines ...So good that he could uproot an average 200 British mines an hour. This enabled him to travel pretty much as he willed through British mine fields, and on one particular occasion he used the British's own mines to protect two flanks, having to worry only about the front and rear of his column.

Lodge also was frankly admiring about Rommel's number one tank-busting weapon, the 88-millimeter gun. Formerly used as an anti-aircraft weapon, it "would go through anything it hit."

ROMMEL'S tanks carried center-mounted guns, which means they had a 360-degree fire radius, as opposed to the 36-degree radius available to our M-3's, or "General Grants," which mounted their guns on the side. A newer allied tank, the M-4, has converted its gun-mount to the center, and should be the equal of or possibly superior to the German tank.

All through Lodge's conversation, you get the idea that Rommel's early superiority was due more to greater experience and preparedness than to any semi-supernatural powers of leadership and strategy. As allied experience and fire power gradually catches up to the German standard, the Rommel legend is apt to fade accordingly.

"That fellow on the wall," Lodge says, pointing to a picture of Gen. George (Old-Blood-and-Guts) Patton, "is good enough to knock Rommel's ears down, and there are a couple more mechanized experts in the American Army who can do the same thing."

"SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER"

"O'er the Land of the Free" 128 Years

"The Star Spangled Banner" Has an Anniversary.

FAME comes in many ways. Tuesday, Sept. 15, marked the fame that came to a man for one poem—a poem, moreover, that few persons ever have learned in full.

One hundred and twenty-eight years ago, in 1814, Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star Spangled Banner," national anthem of the United States. He had nothing whatever to do with the music that has been under such severe criticism for so many years that his poem's merit has been neglected. What the United States should have is not a new national anthem, but better music for an anthem that has more than a century and a quarter of tradition behind it. The music, incidentally, was borrowed from a selection called "Anachreon In Heaven."

According to an address by the late Henry Watterson at Frederick, Md., in 1898 when a monument was dedicated to Francis Scott Key, the story of the original poem is as follows:

It was near the close of America's "second war of independence." An English army had invaded and occupied Washington and had burned the capitol. An English squadron was in undisputed possession of Chesapeake bay.

The British, having taken everything of consequence, were massing their land and naval forces for new conquests. As their ships sailed down the Potomac, Dr. William Beanes of Maryland was arrested and carried off a prisoner.

Dr. Beanes was a friend and neighbor in Maryland of Francis Scott Key, who obtained permission of the president of the United States to go to the British admiral under a flag of truce to seek the Maryland man's release. Mr. Key was conveyed by the cartel boat used for exchange of prisoners. He, himself, was a resident of Washington at the time.

The party sailed down the Potomac to Baltimore and found the British fleet at the mouth of the river. Mr. Key was courteously received by the admiral, a man named Cochrane, and it was agreed that Dr. Beanes should be released. However, an attack on Baltimore was about to be made, so the Americans were required to remain under guard on board their own vessel until operations were concluded. Thus, it was on the night of Sept. 14, 1814, that Mr. Key saw the bombardment of Fort McHenry, which his song was to memorialize.

HE DID not quick the deck until the next morning. With his single companion, the flag officer, he watched every shell from the moment it was fired, until it fell, listening with breathless interest to hear if an explosion followed.

While the cannonading continued, they knew that their countrymen had not capitulated. The firing suddenly ceased some time before day, and they did not know whether the fort had surrendered or the attack had been abandoned.

They paced the deck the rest of the night, and as soon as it dawned and before it was light enough to see object at a distance, their glasses were turned to the fort, uncertain whether they should see the Stars and Stripes or the flag of the enemy. Their prayers were not in vain.

During the night the conception of the poem began to form in Key's mind. With the early glow of the morning, when the long agony of suspense was over, his feeling found expression in completed lines of verse, which he wrote upon the back of a letter he had in his possession. He finished the piece on the boat that carried him ashore and wrote a clear copy that same evening at his hotel in Baltimore. The next day he read this to his friend and kinsman, Judge Nicholson, who carried it to the office of The Baltimore American, where it was put in type by a young apprentice, Samual Sands, thence issued as a broadside; within one hour it was circulating all over the city.

Published in the succeeding issue of The American and elsewhere reprinted, it captured the popular heart. It was quickly scored for musical adaptation. First sung by Charles Durang, an actor, whose brother, Ferdinand Durang, had set it to music, its production on the stage was an occasion for spontaneous enthusiasm; its effect was electrical and it was popularly accepted as the national anthem.

THE POEM tells its own story:

"O say can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous night
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming
The rockets red glare, the bombs bursting in air
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there."

But there came at last an end to waiting and as the first rays of the sun shot above the horizon and gilded the eastern shore, behold the sight that gladdens their eyes.

"As it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream."

For there over the battlements of Fort McHenry, the Stars and Stripes floated defiant in the breeze. The attack has failed and the British were withdrawing their forces.

For then and for now and for all time come the immortal words:

"O thus be it ever when freemen shall stand,
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation
Blest with victory and peace may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the power that had made and preserved us a nation."
for
"Conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto, 'In God Is Our Trust'
And The Star Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

The words and music of "The Star Spangled Banner" were designated as the national anthem by an act of congress in 1931.

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Saturday, Sept. 17, 1932.

Gov. George White issued a call for an extraordinary session of the Ohio legislature starting Sept. 27 to consider salary slashes for all state employes, made necessary by a decrease in state income.

Sheriff C. Fred Vollmer and deputies of Crawford county were seeking some trace of two hold-up men reported by Robert Gilliland, Oceola resident, as having robbed him of $1,074, money he had saved to start married life with a Nevada girl.

Will Rogers, commenting on the political situation in his daily message, reported, "Roosevelt is headed west. Says he is 'just out to meet the folks', but he will give preferment to anyone of legal age, and a registered voter. Mr. Hoover, who originally wasn't going further west during the campaign than the Potomac, has started looking at time tables. Politicians, in order to hold the real dyed in the wool radio nuts, are crooning their speeches."

Henry Fralich, 83, a resident of Marion county 60 years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. J. Whiteman of Waldo.

John T. Bland, 66, died at his home on Blaine avenue.

County Surveyor Cecil R. Leavens announced the county road program for 1932 was completed. Thirty-nine roads, with a total length of 80 miles, had been surface treated at a cost of $16,530.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Sunday, Sept. 17, 1922.

Rev. B. W. Powell, newly appointed pastor of Greenwood Evangelical church, preached his initial sermon on the subject, "What We Can Do." He succeeded Rev. A. F. Beery, who had closed a five-year pastorate here to become pastor of Calvary Evangelical church in Akron.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Thomas of Cheney avenue entertained at a family dinner on honor of Mrs. Thomas' parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McQuown of Wheeling, W. Va.

C. Edward Kagay, 56, of Richwood, died at the Delaware Springs sanatorium.

The Marion Athletic club baseball team won a tournament before a crowd of 1,000 fans at Lincoln park. The other teams playing were Upper Sandusky, Bucyrus and Prospect. In the first game Upper Sandusky defeated Prospect 5-1, Fisher pitching for Upper Sandusky and Briley for Prospect. In the second game Marion defeated Bucyrus 6-4 with McCaffrey in the box for Marion and Troutman for Bucyrus. In the third and deciding game Upper Sandusky lost to Marion 5-4. The winning pitcher in this game was also McCaffrey and Fisher pitched for Upper Sandusky. McCaffrey allowed 11 hits in the two games he pitched, four for Bucyrus and seven for Upper Sandusky.

"Thanks, Joe. I'd forgotten I lent you this buck. That was on May 9, 1941, wasn't it?"

Draft Raids

It's About Time for Searching Parties To Go on Hunt for Men Without Selective Service Card.

By DAMON RUNYON

AS FAR AS I know, we have not yet come to the draft raids of World war I when squads of soldiers made unexpected visits to pool rooms, dance halls and other places of male assemblages and demanded a display of draft registration cards, but this is likely to happen before long.

It is all the more probable now that the older men are being called to the service as fellows around 40 were likely more lax about registering than the youngsters, because many of them had the idea it was more of a form than anything else and that there was little chance of an actual call.

However, some military men are commenting on the number of men obviously in the 21 to 30 group who are seen hanging around the public amusement places in every community or hitch-hiking along the roads, apparently foot-loose, and an inquiry into their draft status seems indicated. Most of them probably have their cards, and yet it is surprising how many unregistered the raids of 25 years ago turned up.

The raiding squads under officers would come lunging into a peaceful poolroom, billiards academy, to use the most effete term, without the slightest warning and everybody present had to display his card, unless he happened to be in a state of senile decrepitude that left no doubt as to his status.

EVEN THEN some of the raiding officers would conduct a lengthy inquiry of the subject, not trusting their own eyes. This was rather flattering to a guy who thought his appearance disclosed him as a candidate for the old men's home and he would thereafter go around all puffed up with vanity. If a man said he had a card but had left it home in his other pants, the raiding officers would detail a soldier to go with him to his home to dig up the little ducat. Those raiders trusted no one.

A man who had not registered at all was taken into custody and put through the processes of induction with a speed that made his head swim. In many cases it was not so much lack of patriotism as neglect that produced the failure to register and these cases were dealt with temperately. But a raft of out-and-out draft evaders were uncovered and these were punished.

The famous work-or-fight order of the other war was partly responsible for the draft raids. A registered man had to show that he was working in some essential industry or go into the army. Those who remember back to those days will recall that after the raids had been going on awhile, the loafers around their old accustomed haunts were confined to the aged and the decrepit.

OFTEN A packed joint would get the "office," or signal, from someone that a raiding squad was coming and the resultant scurry among those who had no cards would be terrific. They would hide in the gents' retiring rooms and under the billiard tables and in obscure corners, but the raiders were pretty good about ferreting them out.

I am speaking here specifically of the situation in New York City, but I believe the raids took place in all cities. That they made draft evasion quite unpopular, there is no doubt, and I would not be surprised to see the secretary of today adopt the practice the moment it becomes convinced that any considerable number of eligibles have leaked through the draft sieve.

Synthetic Rubber Plant Started

Near the little shop in Connecticut where the world's first vulcanized products were manufactured 100 years ago, United States Rubber Company has put into operation New England's first synthetic rubber plant.

Without ceremony a button was pushed starting machinery in the third unit of the synthetic rubber program of Rubber Reserve Company, a subsidiary of RFC.

At this plant the liquid styrene and the gas butadiene, in a liquid form under pressure, arrive in tank cars. Three parts of butadiene are polymerized with one part of styrene to make buna S rubber, primarily for military purposes.

United States Rubber company has started construction of other synthetic rubber plants which it will operate for the government. The company has been using synthetic rubber in its products for more than ten years, and experimented in synthetic development as early as 1921.

Construction of this plant was started before Pearl Harbor. At that time F. B. Davis Jr., president of the company said, "Synthetic rubber is specially important to the nation at this time for two reasons. It has properties superior in many respects to those of natural rubber. And, in the event that the country's supply of crude rubber should be cut off, synthetic rubber could be substituted for defense articles and most civilian products made of rubber."

The plant will be operated under the guidance of John P. Coe, general manager of the company's synthetic division. Mr. Coe stated that remarkable progress had been made in synthetic manufacture during the past year.

Yorktown Suffered Fatal Wounds in June 4 Battle

By RUSSELL WEBB

WITH THE U. S. PACIFIC ... (Delayed)—The ... Yorktown is a ... against the western ... and there is a lump ... throat. The fleet is ... slight hope of ever ... Yorktown again. She ... badly, and she is far ... At best it will be ... she can be towed to ... these are dangerous ... this morning, June 4—although it seems like years—that the Yorktown and her sister ships launched their great broods of planes which already have slashed to bits the Japanese strength hurled toward Midway.

Hour after hour the attacks went on. Suddenly, early this afternoon, the enemy struck back. A little distance away I could see shell bursts in the air, flaming planes falling into the sea, wisps of smoke marking the graves of enemy pilots. The Yorktown was being dive bombed.

Then came a great, ominous belch of black smoke. The bombs hit their target.

Debris Litters Water

This cruiser steamed at full power toward the wreckage of planes, life rafts, splintered boxes, oil slicks and debris of all kinds.

What was left of the enemy had gone as we approached the smoking ship. The Stars and Stripes tossed through the dark haze, and the flashing signal light showed there still was life on the bridge. We circled, waiting and hoping, while desperate efforts were made to get the fire under control. The Yorktown lay dead in the water.

Slowly th smoke lessened. We could see several planes still on the Yorktown's deck which apparently had only been nicked. Other planes were criss-crossing overhead. The ship appeared on an even keel, and hopes grew.

Hardly a word was spoken during those long, anxious minutes.

"Look, the Yorktown's moving." The gunners around me were jubilant.

Within another few minutes the entire fleet was under way.

Then there came a quick report: "Enemy planes."

Every gun was manned and the fleet was set for action.

"Enemy planes. Closing fast."

The Yorktown had sufficient speed now to launch her remaining planes, and they were roaring off the flight deck.

"Enemy planes to port."

Three Waves of Planes

There were two waves of them, torpedo planes coming low and dive bombers far above. It was a combined attack—the last, desperate assault of an already beaten enemy.

Our fighters were tearing into both groups. Few of the dive bombers ever get through, and no one was paying much attention to them anyway—we were watching the flashing torpedo planes, there appeared to be fifteen of them. Some fell away in flames, in spirals of smoke, in weird tumbles. Our fighters were taking a heavy toll.

Nine of the attackers kept right on coming. They apparently were aiming straight for the carrier. This cruiser stood between. As they came within range, the whole fleet's anti-aircraft opened up with such a din I don't remember hearing a thing after the first second. The attackers tried to dive beneath the barrage. More planes fell. Our own planes, too, were all mixed up in the dizzy aerial whirl.

The most distinct memory I have of the moment is that every gun on the Yorktown was blazing. She was putting up a scrap if any ship ever did.

Two Jap planes zipped astern of us to drop their deadly fish right at the carrier. I didn't see them hit.

At that moment, another enemy craft was slashing over our bow through a veritable wall of shell fire. His machine guns were pounding straight toward us. Across the bow, he went into a steep glide and let his silvered load plop into the water. He died within ten seconds in a mass of flames when the last plane to roar off the Yorktown cut him to pieces. The attack was over.

The sudden stillness was stifling. Our own fighters now were far away chasing the few remaining enemy planes. Every eye was on the Yorktown.

Ship Lists Badly

The ship was listing badly. Two planes flying like struggling beetles to her tilting deck. It was a sickening sight.

Men were sliding down ropes and dropping into the water. Destroyers were pulling alongside and picking them up. The signal went up—"I am abandoning ship."

Hundreds of survivors took to life boats and rafts and were taken to several nearby ships. Hundreds of bobbing heads found safety with the lifebelts tossed from all sides. Men were working fast, but it was an orderly abandonment—if any such drama could ever be so described.

An hour went by, two hours—hours that seemed like a bad dream. We watched silently from a few hundred yards away. All this time the enemy never came back—and we knew suddenly that the battle of Midway had been won. We hated to see the abandonment finished, because we were afraid of what our own guns might be called on to do. It would have seemed like terrible cruelty to a living thing to have blasted that stricken ship.

Then we learned she was not to be sunk. With three bombs and probably three torpedoes, she still had a chance to live.

Two days later, the navy's announcement yesterday said, a Japanese submarine sent two torpedoes into the crippled ship as she was being towed toward port. The added damage was more than the Yorktown could stand and she capsized and sank.

CHECKUP OF HEATING EQUIPMENT SUMMER JOB

Savings on Fuel Consumption Especially Urged Now.

Home owners should have their stokers, furnaces, oil burners, boilers, and other heating equipment carefully inspected during the remaining summer weeks in the interest of war economy and to avoid the possibility of creating railroad bottlenecks.

Experiences learned during World War I teach that every carload of coal wasted by inefficient combustion, uncovered steam piping, cracked settings, and other efficiency leaks, is not only a load of coal wasted but a freight car trip that was made uselessly.

To obtain the maximum amount of heat from every pound of coal, and pint of oil burned, home owners throughout the nation are being urged to put their heating equipment in perfect working order.

Equipment that is in good working condition cuts down materially on fuel consumption, which, during this period of national emergency, is an important consideration, and is also an economy to the home owner.

In connection with the telephone system radiotelephone services has been established linking the Humber Area of Newfoundland with St. John's and through that city with Canada and the United States.

In and Around Marion

Couldn't Resist

Melon stealing a la 1942.

The big truck loaded with cantaloupes was having a hard time making the South Main street hill.

Three men were in a passenger car following the truck.

Two of the men jumped out of the car, walked ahead to the truck, selected several fine melons, and walked back to the car. When last seen the car was passing the truck on the hill.

Happy Memory

One Marion gal didn't get to the movie star dinner and it was a sad evening in her life.

One of the pleasantest evenings she ever spent was with Fred Astaire at a swank outdoors dining and dance spot. They danced over tables and chairs—doing the unusual Astaire routines.

But it was only a date in a dream.

When her husband heard of her wonderful evening he said caustically: "And you were better than Ginger Rogers, I suppose!"

"I was doing all right," she replied.

A grinding tool mounted on a flexible shaft to be attached to and operated by an electric drill has been invented by a New Jersey man to hone automobile wheel cylinders without removal from car to improve their braking efficiency.

Thrift, as it has been practiced for more than forty years in all Penney stores, has again become a national virtue and a vital necessity.

There has never been room for waste in Penney stores. And there is no room for waste in a nation that intends to win its war. That is why Penney's is so well able to make an important contribution to the nation's war effort, and to your own savings toward it.

Thrift may be a plodding virtue . . . but it lies at the very heart of success in all important enterprises . . . from storekeeping to war-winning!

War Workers' 30-Minute Home

HURRY-UP HOUSE—Knock-down dwelling like this can be erected in a short time. Prefabricated, they can be torn down and moved easily.

By RONALD AUTRY
Wide World Features Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—War-necessitated, comfortable residences for war workers are rolling off assembly lines here just as tanks do at Detroit.

The prefabricated houses, built to house workers can be taken down and reassembled on a new location easily — and everything going into their construction can be salvaged.

They are neat, modern bungalows with hot water heating plants, cooking ranges, shower baths and hot and cold running water. All have heating plants using either oil or electricity—whichever may be more accessible and cheaper.

Made in three sizes—one, two or three bedrooms — each has a kitchen, dining room, bath, screened porch and a world of closet space.

E. L. Bruce Co. is constructing 1520 buildings on a war department contract. After the contract was signed, the government asked how many more homes the company could build. And workers are concentrating on a goal of one complete house every 30 minutes. Far from "shotgun houses," the buildings have prefinished oak flooring; insulated walls, roofs and floors, and outer surfaces of waterproof plywood that has been given the government's 36-hour boiling test.

The homes cost from $2,600 to $3,350, the latter figure being for three bedrooms.

Although the houses were being made before the war, the industry—it has about 270 companies in the country—had not operated on such a grand, speedy scale. But after the war, M. H. Carpenter says, business will really boom.

Carpenter, vice-president of Carpenter Homes, Inc., of Baltimore under whose patents the Bruce company manufacture, predicts:

"They may even develop them to the point where one can buy a prefabricated house like you bought an automobile before the war—trading it in for a larger house when the need arises, or for a new model when the improvements appear."

MARDI GRAS QUEEN

Pretty Violetta Weems, selected Queen of this year's Coney Island Mardi Gras, in New York, waves a happy hand to merrymakers from her float. She rode in regal splendor at the head of the parade that began after she was chosen queen.

And That's That!

By The Associated Press

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — A lady with a glint in her eye and an out-thrust jaw went into an Eighth ward polling place and demanded a ballot. With vigor she scratched out a name on it. "I wanted the satisfaction of voting against every one of them," she said as she straightened her hat and slammed the door after her.

Heretofore imported chiefly from Japan, agar is being mainly cured from seaweed for the first time on a commercial scale in the United States by a chemical plant at San Diego, Cal.

The vote among farmers in the mid-west section was 71 per cent in favor, 7 per cent opposed, 16 per cent qualified, and 6 per cent undecided.

Persons who gave qualified answers indicated that they favored farm price control without wage control, or vice versa.

In the case of farmers, however, all persons giving qualified answers said they favored wage control, but not farm price control.

Following up its telegraphic survey, the Institute is polling all sections of the country in order to make a final report before the Oct. 1 deadline set by the President for congressional action.

Earlier surveys have shown that a majority of voters throughout the country were ready to accept a wage-price control law as long as the first of this year.

Japanese Beetles Again Raiding Marion Foliage

Traps Show Presence of Insects; Public Urged To Aid in Drive To Halt Spread.

By LOREN W. TIBBALS

Unknown to a majority of Marion residents, panzer divisions in the form of Japanese beetles are waging a successful campaign of sabotage and destruction in scattered parts of the city.

During a 30-day check recently completed here under the supervision of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, the FBI organization of the U. S. department of agriculture, a total of 27 male and female beetles were trapped.

The beetles were caught in a dozen or more traps, part of a group of 300 placed here in a city-wide survey for traces of the Japanese beetle. Although similar traps were placed here previously for the purpose of discovering the presence and distribution of the insect, it was not until the last few weeks during this year's check that the bug was found in large numbers.

Location of Traps

Beetles were found in traps located on the following streets: Bennett, West Center, Latourette, Nye, Lee and Waterloo streets and Bartram, Fies and Nelson avenues.

Different forms of transportation are directly responsible in most cases for the spread of the Japanese beetle, department of agriculture specialists say. Beetles have been known to be transported from one section of the country to another in either cars, trucks, boats, trains, and various other forms of travel.

The bugs found here are believed to have been carried into Marion on freight and passenger trains because of two reasons: (1) all finds made here were located near main railroad lines or sidings, and (2) railroads are chiefly responsible for carrying the beetle to isolated areas from highly infected areas.

New Sprays Developed

To combat spread of the insect throughout the nation, U. S. department of agriculture workers have introduced many new sprays and fumigants, many of which are highly successful when applied under ideal conditions.

One of the most common chemicals used to fight the insect is arsenate of lead. This chemical has been used for many years by home owners, truck farmers and nurserymen as a spray and is now widely used by both both federal and state departments of agriculture.

Steps toward applying an arsenate of lead spray to approximately 35 acres of privately-owned land began here recently under the direction of the division of plant industry of the state department of agriculture. E. W. Mendenhall of Columbus, a state inspector, is in Marion to obtain permission from land owners in the affected area granting either the state or federal departments of agriculture or both the right to take all steps necessary in ridding the area of the beetle.

To Use Arsenate of Lead

Solutions of arsenate of lead will be applied to all land within the infected area at no cost to the individual home owner, Mr. Mendenhall pointed out.

While the total finds in Marion this summer are not alarmingly high, state department of agriculture officials said steps to eradicate the beetle will be taken, provided funds are made available by the state.

Marion's central location in a rich agricultural section makes it extremely important to complete spraying operations in all infected sections, they pointed out.

The Japanese beetle was first found in 1916 near Riverton, N. J. Since then the infestation has increased and spread outward at a relatively rapid rate.

Less than a dozen beetles were found the first year in a half-mile radious of Riverton. However, by 1919 the general distribution area covered an estimated 16,300 square miles in six seaboard states and isolated colonies were known to exist in almost every state east of the Mississippi river.

Beetle's Life Cycle

1. The newly-hatched larva, or grub, is about one-sixteenth of an inch in length, has three pairs of legs and has the general shape of a blunt-end crescent. When fully grown it is about an inch in length and resembles in general appearance the larvae of June bettles, commonly known as "white grubs."

2. The pupa, or the stage in which the grub transforms to the adult beetle, has a pale-cream or tan color and is about one-half inch long and one-fourth inch wide.

3. The adult beetle is nearly half an inch long, about one-fourth an inch wide, broadly oval and shining metallic green. The hard outer wings are copperv brown. Two small tufts of white hairs just behind the wing covers and five smaller patches along each side of the body distinguish the Japanese beetle from other beetles often mistaken for it.

The injury caused by the feeding of the adult beetle on foliage of plant life is conspicuous. Feeding is confined almost entirely to the foliage on the upper and outer parts of plants and from exposure to bright sunlight, rather than the warmer part of the day.

Its Feeding Habits

The adult stage of the Japanese beetle is a very [illegible]

...ed by placing them in a ...ntainer of water and before ...

Sprays Effective

Sprays which kill by coming in direct contact with the body of the insect while large numbers of beetles are contacted, either the state or federal departments of agriculture will supply a list of these sprays.

Contact sprays are most effective if used between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. when the sun is shining and the temperature above 80 degrees. Although contact sprays will kill large quantities of beetles their sprays do not leave a repellent residue on the foliage and consequently the plants may become reinfected.

Traps, similar to the ones in use in Marion this summer, are also one of the chief means of killing beetles. Several different types of traps have been developed by U. S. department of agriculture workers. One developed recently embodying the following features has proven most successful: a four-winged baffle on top of and projecting into a funnel, to which is attached a container for holding captured beetles.

Attracted by Yellow

A trap painted a primary-yellow color, according to statistics of the federal department, will catch more beetles than the same trap painted another color. A liquid mixture composed of geranium oil and eugenol is the most attractive bait. The best means of dispensing the bait is by using a bottle and cork. A cone-shaped device to protect the bait and which is common feature of most traps.

Most hardware stores either stock or can order traps meeting requirements of the federal department.

Any method by which the number of beetles on the premises may be reduced will be of benefit in defraying the natural increase in the beetle population, as well as affording some protection to plants.

HOUSE REPUBLICANS TO BACK PRESIDENT

Prepared To Support Anti-Inflation Program.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—Ohio Republicans in the house apparently will support any anti-inflation program worked by congressional leaders trying to pass price control legislation by Oct. 1, as urged by President Roosevelt.

Unlike Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican of Ohio, the house Republicans refrained from outspoken criticism of the President for saying he would take matters into his own hands unless congress acted.

The senator declared that the President's attitude was out of line with representative government and amounted to a threat of dictatorship.

Representative John E. Hunter, Toledo Democrat, said [illegible] we can trust the President to handle the situation.

While ready to [illegible] emergency [illegible] the Republicans expressed [illegible] direct the President [illegible] wages as well as [illegible] Some of them said privately they [illegible] President make a [illegible] that congress act on [illegible] leading wages to a level [illegible] the executive order.

At the [illegible] however, only half the group could attend and those present decided against issuing any statement. Their decision was that nuisance expressions might not reflect the policy that might be adopted later by the minority leadership guided by closer contact with those charged with the task of handling the inflation threat.

Error in Hardin Co. War Project Revealed

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., Sept. 17—The army construction project that was announced for Hardin county, Sept. 5, apparently was an error, local leaders were advised today as it became known that George W. Timmons, Columbus contractor, instead had been awarded a war department contract for work in Greene county, near Xenia. At time of the announcement, Hardin county was to receive a project for which $100,000 to $500,000 was allotted for construction of temporary frame buildings.

Timmons, the contractor, said he had not received any contract for work in Hardin county and expressed the belief the war department referred to the one in Greene county. Nature or purpose of the contract is a secret.

A Promise for Tomorrow

BY ELEANOR ATTERBURY

"Thanks for the lecture, Doc," Pete said hollowly.

CHAPTER ONE.
Lost Sweetheart.

JULIE ... the headlines as she ... to the office after ... FOUR SHIPS LAUNCHED AT LOCAL YARD TODAY. ... were beginning to ... she thought, smiling ... dropped a coin in the ... paw, scanned the ... page while the creaking ele... her up three flights. ... today would put ... well in the lead. ... help Pete through ...

"... isn't it, Dr. Julie?" ... grinned as he hauled ... rattled door for her. ... Fowler's got a head ... right, even if he ain't ... a leg. Bet Old Fow... proud of him today."

"We all are," Julie smiled, hurried down the long musty hallway to the front offices.

She pushed open the door where for thirty-five years the name Thomas B. Hamilton, M. D., had been painted in black letters, and where for thirteen months another name had been added below—Julie B. Hamilton, M. D.

It hadn't seemed that long since she'd finally won the coveted degree. Every moment since had been so full of work and anxiety and even dark fears. But Dad's confidence, his pride in her had, as always, helped her over the bad spots.

She nodded at Miss Dalton, a stiff spike of starched white linen on guard in the reception room. "Any messages?"

"Mr. Pete Fowler will be in for a heat treatment," Miss Dalton said briskly. "Dr. Tom has been detained at the hospital. Will you give the treatment or shall I?"

Julie grimaced. "You do it. Pete wouldn't let me prescribe a cough drop."

"Very well, Dr. Julie." Unbending, Miss Dalton went back to her desk.

Julie slipped out of her coat, into a white uniform, and consulted her appointment book. Not a free moment until five-thirty. Days on end had been like this. Dad's practice, and incidentally her own, had more than doubled in the last six months. With all the younger doctors going into the service, Julie's hard-fought battle for her M. D. didn't now seem so unnecessary. She was glad she hadn't let anything — even the hoots and jeers of two older brothers—deter her.

"What you want is MRS., Little Sissy," they teased. "Not M. D. You aren't built to be a career woman. Besides, who'd trust a pretty pair of hands like yours with a scalpel?"

Good Soldier.

PRETTY or not, these hands had held scalpels, and forceps and healing, and people did trust her. She felt grateful—and humble. Not all the old patients, of course—the Fowlers and the Kellands, the rich and the influential. They still insisted on seeing Dr. Tom. But many of the new people, men working to make Pete's ships move off the ways in record time, and their families. Julie'd already won her first battle against an epidemic of measles and broken arms, and brought dozens of mothers triumphantly through childbirth. She'd stood without flinching at her father's elbow through the long, difficult operations that saved lives, re-built broken bodies.

"You're a good soldier," Dr. Tom had told her. "I'm proud of you."

Julie wore his praise like an invisible medal, glad that she too could serve. With two brothers piloting planes somewhere in the South Pacific and setting records for heroism, it was only her share of the load.

Not that all heroes were in the South Pacific, at that she added, wincing as she heard Pete Fowler's deep voice in the reception room, the dull thud of his cane on the polished floor. Tall, powerfully-built Pete who, like her own big handsome brothers, had taken to the air like a young eagle, had flown hundreds of miles for outstanding recognition, only to end his brilliant career in a crash that was as humiliating as it was horrible. A bad landing that killed his commanding officer and sent Pete to a hospital with a broken back.

They'd said he'd never walk again. But they hadn't known Pete. What exercise and swimming and expert care hadn't done for him, sheer will power had accomplished. He walked—with a cane when his back ached most—but often with only a slight limp. But the eagle's wings had been cut and Julie for one, knew that behind Pete's smiling calm lay horrible suffering.

Hiding pity behind a bright smile, she opened the door.

No Pity.

"HELLO, Pete. How does it happen, you're not down launching a boat?"

Pete, despite his injury, still carried his head high, his shoulders squared. He grinned down at her, his deep blue eyes catching the gleam of his match as he lit a small-bowled pipe.

"Well Little Sis, I have to admit that the boys can launch the boats without my help."

"Not really!" she teased, slipping as usual into her role of old-friend-and-playmate.

There'd been a time, a too-terribly-short-time, when Pete's blue eyes had told her she'd been promoted from playmate to sweetheart. That had been before the accident. Since then she'd been little sister of his best friends — nothing more.

"Does she hand out baloney to all the patients, Miss Dalton?" Pete winked at the nurse who appeared now in the doorway.

Miss Dalton released one of her brisk smiles that came and went without affecting the dull gray of her eyes. "Dr. Julie is a competent physician, Mr. Fowler. I will have the lamp ready in a moment. Please be seated."

Pete grimaced at her thin straight back as she closed the door carefully. Then he grinned at Julie. "See what being an old maid career woman does to you?" he hissed in a stage whisper. "I'll bet old Dalton was a human being once."

Julie bit back a sharp answer. "But when you can serve best as a doctor, and you prefer independence to marriage with just anybody—"

"Bart Rogers isn't just anybody. He'd take care of you the way—"

Partly out of pique, partly out of painful memories, Julie lashed out suddenly. "But I don't want to be taken care of! I'm not a baby, and when I get married it will be to — to —" Anger died, left a strange lump in her throat. "—To whomever I please. And I don't need your advice."

She put a check rein on her own emotions, tried to remember that as a competent physician, she should be above quarreling with a patient.

"I should give you Priscilla's answer to John Alden," she tried to say flippantly. "Why don't you speak for yourself?"

Pete's smile flickered. "Don't hand me that, Julie. When I want your pity, I'll ask for it."

"Why—Pete!" What are you saying!" Horrified, she tried to stop him.

He faced her, blue eyes cold and hard. "I'm telling you I'm no hero. I'm a damned fool. I had my chance to be of some real use and I muffed it. You're sorry for me. Everybody's sorry for me. And damn the whole pack of you—don't think you're fooling me with your fine praise and your jolly back-slapping."

Something gave Julie the courage to say what her doctor's training told her to. "Of course I'm sorry for you. But not because you had the rotten luck to crack up a plane. Hundreds of pilots have done that. And lived through it. Certainly I'm sorry. Sorry that you haven't the will power to snap out of it, take what you have to take, and keep your courage."

For a moment Pete just looked at her, his face a white mask. Then he said, hollowly, "Thanks for the lecture, doc."

Julie didn't answer. She could only stand horrified at the cold fury in Pete's eyes, aware that with that moment went the last possible hope that someday the Pete who had been her sweetheart might come back.

JAP LOSSES

terday in the first report on that area since Aug. 22 when an American submarine sank an enemy merchantman. A Pacific fleet headquarters' communique said the action occurred Tuesday but both agreed on all substantial facts.

Bell Airacobras and P-38's, on their first such mission in the Aleutians, escorted army heavy bombers, Consolidated "Liberators," on the assault without loss except for two P-38 Lightnings which collided over Kiska.

Enemy resistance with fighter planes and anti-aircraft fire was weak, enabling American forces to carry out what the Pacific fleet headquarters termed a "most successful attack." Four Zero fighters and one small plane were brought down and a large Japanese patrol plane was smashed while on the water.

Hold Guadalcanal Base

At the other end of the far-flung Pacific battle theater, the marines still clung to their Guadalcanal base, as the navy announced that the intensity of the fighting had decreased. Marine patrols, meanwhile, still sought to drive enemy units from the interior of the island.

A Japanese cruiser and destroyer force was spotted yesterday off Choiseul, the navy said, by navy and marine Devastator dive bombers and navy Grumman Avenger torpedo planes. One of the cruisers was damaged by a bomb and the other by a torpedo in the action about 200 miles northwest of Guadalcanal. This boosted the toll on enemy shipping in the Solomons to more than a score sunk or damaged. In the Aleutians, the Japanese have had 32 ships lost or damaged to date as a result of the latest U. S. air attack.

Jap East Asia Drive Warning May Be a Trick

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

The [illegible] are to bring [illegible] the announcement by General H[illegible] Jap [illegible] [illegible] A[illegible] perfect [illegible] Far East [illegible] said [illegible] suppose [illegible] Japs [illegible]

Just what game [illegible] Japanese are spreading this rumor [illegible] apparent, [illegible] the color of red herring is pretty strong. Maybe the Japs are following the [illegible] adopting Hitler's tactics of fooling the enemy by announcing [illegible] intentions in advance. It is equally possible that Hirohito is just crazy for lebensraum for Nippon and country.

The probabilities are that Japan doesn't want to undertake either of these dangerous adventures. They would be illogical military moves, since her whole business now should be to consolidate her dangerously widespread conquests before America's rapidly growing strength overtakes her. She will be a fool if she attacks Russia or India.

Cat's Paw for Nazis

Still, the importunities of the powerful Hitler may move the Japs to embark on a [illegible] war in hopes that this may hasten the end of the war. The fall of Stalingrad would be unpleasant, and should the Japs be inveigled into playing cat's paw for the Nazi all-highers, the fall of Stalingrad might turn the trick.

The perils Japan would risk in going after Siberia or India would be many. The most vital considerations is that in either case she would be seriously weakening her forces of all categories in the southwest Pacific thereby making Uncle Sam's task immeasurably easier.

This would be particularly true as regards India. Overland invasion through Burma and across the towering mountain ranges isn't feasible on a big scale. The Japs would have to employ a great waterborne expedition. And right now they need every transport, warship and airplane for use in the Pacific warfare.

In the case of Russia, the Nipponese would lay Tokyo and other great cities open to heavy aerial bombardment the moment the war began, and the Reds have strong air forces at neighboring Vladivostok and other Siberian stations.

Bases for U. S.

Russian territory would become available for American air bases. The Soviet submarine fleet at Vladivostok, estimated at 100 boats, would start raiding Japanese waters.

Should Japan attack Russia it would be with the hope that the Muscovites have been so weakened in their long and bloody conflict with Hitler that the added weight of a Jap assault might bring a quick collapse of the Soviet. The Japs also would aim at acquiring military security by conquering Vladivostok and other menacing bases. There [illegible] the not unimportant matter of gaining rich new territories.

A successful conquest of India would be calculated to enable the Nazis and the Japanese to join forces in the Middle East. India itself would be a prize beyond price, and one which Nippon long has coveted.

Whether the Japs will regard the prizes as worth the risk remains to be seen. In any event, if they should undertake any such venture, I believe it will be in the nature of a defensive move rather than because of greed for new territory.

British Push Drive on Madagascar Capital

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 17 — British forces were believed to be continuing their week-old advance today upon Tananarive, seat of the French administration of Madagascar, pending an agreement on armistice terms.

Sources here said there was no official information in London on the progress of negotiations which Governor General Armand Annet of Madagascar sought of the British commander, or of terms which might have been proposed. In seeking the armistice Annet asked that talks be arranged "to find means by which we can cease fighting with honor."

British columns were reported officially to have pushed more than half the way inland toward the capital.

Group Votes Aid To Plane Purchase Fund

A contribution of $5 to a nationwide Veterans of Foreign Wars drive to buy 15 training planes for the army air corps was made at a meeting Wednesday night of the auxiliary to Marion Post No. 3313.

The auxiliary will observe its seventh anniversary with a pot-luck supper Sept. 30. Mrs. Nevada Roberts, Mrs. Marion Griffiths, Mrs. Anna Deyo and Mrs. Virginia Owens were named on the supper committee and Mrs. Delsie Baker and Mrs. Mildred Pickeral were named on the program committee.

Reports of the recent national convention in Cincinnati were made by Mrs. Lydia Ralston, Mrs. Bess Loyer, Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Margaret Foreman.

INDUSTRIES TURN IN SCRAP METAL PILE

Marion, Upper Sandusky and Mt. Gilead Report Listed.

A total of 182,816 pounds of scrap metals and paper was collected from industrial plants in Marion, Upper Sandusky and Mt. Gilead during August, according to a report of the Marion bureau of industrial conservation. The metal has been placed either at the disposal of scrap dealers or industrial concerns, C. O'Brown, chairman of the local industrial conservation bureau, said.

The total poundage was divided among seven groups in the following order: iron and steel 131,760; copper 5,135; brass 41,674; tin 72; nickel 2,610; paper 520; and rubber 1,050.

The figures are included in the bureau's August report, a copy of which has been forwarded to the office of the WPB in Cleveland.

Marion-Upper Sandusky Couple's Child Stricken

Larry N. Stansberry, four-months-old son of Craig and Bertha Roush Stansberry of Lima, died yesterday at the parents' home. He was born May 8 in Lima. The father is a native of Upper Sandusky and the mother of Marion. Funeral services will be tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Schaffner-Denver funeral home with Rev. D. N. Kelly of Wesley Methodist church in charge. Burial will be in the Marion cemetery.

Offices Filled In Local CIO Council

Ellis Oiler was elected chairman of the local C.I.O. industrial union council at a meeting at 133½ East Center street last night. He was elected to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Floyd Wilson, who left to assume the duties of a Marion city patrolman. John Makeever was elected financial secretary and treasurer to take the place of Mr. Oiler, who had held that office. Harold Gibson was elected as a trustee to take the place of Mr. Makeever, the former trustee. Mr. Oiler appointed Herbert Wade as a permanent member of the Marion county fire rationing board.

All Men in 3 Villages Reported Shot by Nazis

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 17—A Reuters dispatch from Istanbul today quoted Belgrade reports that the Germans had shot all male inhabitants of four Yugoslav villages and sent the women and children to concentration camps in reprisal for the blowing up of a German military train.

The train, carrying troops and war supplies, was blown up by Serbian irregulars on Sept. 10, it was stated, and many young officers on their way to reinforce Marshal Rommel's Africa corps were killed.

Farm Labor Shortage Problems Face Ohio but Marion County Not Troubled

Comparatively Few Perishable Crops To Be Harvested This Year, Checkup Here Shows.

If there is a farm labor shortage in Marion county it is not acute, in the opinion of A. H. Smith, Marion county agricultural agent, and Fred B. Scherff, manager of the Marion office of the United States Employment Service.

Contacted this morning about an Associated Press report from Cleveland that part of Ohio's expanded wartime food crops may go to waste for lack of farm labor to harvest them, Mr. Scherff said the demands for farm labor made through the employment office have been fewer this year than in any year since the office has been open. Surveys made by his office have failed to uncover any acute shortage.

County Agent Smith said most complaints he has received from farmers are not of a labor shortage but the fact that the labor is inexperienced.

Perishable Crops Light

He said that Marion county farmers, apparently anticipating some labor shortage this fall, had planted few perishable crops and instead had kept their planting to crops that can be harvested over a longer period of times. He said he knew of no large tomato crops in the county.

The Associated Press report today stated that a survey of large-producing northern Ohio counties, where farmers are appealing to the U. S. employment service for help, they are being told none is to be had.

Appeals have been made from pulpits and to civilian defense organizations in the Sandusky area, and a number of club women unused to such work have answered the pleas to pick apples and grapes, says Marcus J. Kintz employment service manager there.

Because of the labor shortage, farm experts say, acres of hay went uncut and as a result greater quantities of grain will be required for dairy feeding next winter.

Trumbull Co. Problem

The Trumbull county dairy farms were reported to be receiving government feed wheat in carload lots for their herds. Trumbull is second among Ohio counties in dairy production. Furthermore, Victor Logan of the county agricultural association said at Niles that "fields of luxurious and abundant silage corn are in hazardous condition." Whether they will be lost depends partly on availability of labor, he added.

Agricultural Agent Ormann R. Keyser of Stark county reported a quantity of fruit remained to be picked there. In an effort to obtain some aid for farmers, members of Canton civic organizations will be asked to work Sundays.

Orchard Labor Shortage

An apple grower in the Cleveland area, who expects a crop of 10,000 apples this year, said that Tennessee labor formerly available could no longer be obtained.

"There is no labor in sight, and I have canvassed the situation pretty carefully," this grower added.

Agricultural experts say the crops most seriously threatened by the labor shortage are apples, potatoes and soybeans.

To help pack the large crop of tomatoes, scores of Bellevue club women, housewives and high school girls are working in their spare time at the Bellevue Kraut Co., which holds contracts to supply the armed forces.

Can General Freeze Stall Hitler Again?

Wide World Features

After suffering some staggering blows in his tussle last year with General Weather, Hitler has this year turned south for his operations. The freeze period in the Stalingrad area comes late in October, but south of the Crimea and in the rich oil areas of the Caucasus the average mean temperature even in January stands above the freezing point. On the west coast of the Caspian Sea, scene of current Nazi operations, rainfall is heaviest during the Winter, however.

Three Judges Named for Jacoby Hearing

Three common pleas judges will preside at a hearing of a charge filed against C. W. Jacoby, attorney facing disciplinary action, and of a demurrer Monday at 10 a. m. in the common pleas court room.

Chief Justice Carl V. Weygandt, at the request of Common Pleas Judge Hector S. Young, has assigned Judge Marion B. Owen of Urbana, Judge Fred H. Wolf of Wauseon and Judge Edmond H. Savord of Sandusky to preside.

The charge against Mr. Jacoby was filed by two attorneys named by Judge Young to prepare after a report on Mr. Jacoby's activities by the Forest Glen Inn was filed by the Marion County Bar association. Mr. Jacoby has filed a demurrer to the charge.

Crestline Veteran And Wife at G. A. R. Meet

Thomas Ridenour, 96, of Crestline, immediate past commander of the Ohio department of the G. A. R., and his wife went to Indianapolis Sunday to attend the national encampment of the organization.

A half-hundred Civil war veterans were at the opening session today for what The Associated Press report from Indianapolis stated "probably will be the last formal national encampment."

As the fighting men of '61 met to elect a national commander, members of various affiliated organizations expressed belief that no future G. A. R. national encampments would be held.

The only business remaining at the 76th annual encampment was the election of a commander, and John S. Dumser, 93-year-old Ohioan, Galt, veteran, was unopposed for the post now held by George A. Gay, Nashua, N. H.

Five WPA District Offices Abolished

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17—Dr. Carl Watson, Ohio WPA administrator, announced today abolishment of the last five WPA district offices in the state, effective Oct. 1.

They are at Columbus, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo and Zanesville, and were the only offices left out of an original 16 set up in 1935.

Watson also announced the WPA state auditing and payroll sections of the finance division would be merged Oct. 1 with a new federal works agency finance office to be opened in Cincinnati to serve Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

Abolishment of the district offices Watson said, followed a steady decline in the working load, which he said now was 19,000 with between 7,000 and 8,000 awaiting assignment. All future operations will be handled directly from a central office at state headquarters here.

Man in Police Fight Requests Jury Trial

Elgin Scowden, 45, of 224 Sharo street, who engaged in a sidewalk fight with two city policemen on July 24 on West Center street, has pleaded not guilty to charges of intoxication, disorderly conduct and resisting a police officer and has requested a municipal court jury trial.

In the West Center street fight with Patrolman Paris Romine and Homer E. Osmun, Scowden suffered a skull fracture, a deep cut over his left eye and bruises at the back of his head. Both policemen suffered minor injuries and their uniforms were torn badly.

Scowden received treatment at City hospital from the night of the fight until Aug. 4. He has been out on bond since the latter date pending arraignment. Municipal court officials said today no trial date has been set.

GALION, Sept. 17 — Coordinating their effort with full-time civilian defense activities in Galion, members of the emergency feeding committee, under the direction of Lucy Ann [illegible], emergency and welfare chairman, met Wednesday night at the city building to continue organizational work.

With future plans for a [illegible] mobilization in mind the group members formulated menus for emergency feeding in case of disaster. It was suggested that women of Galion could aid the effort by an inventory of their kitchens to determine the number of large utensils or hand [illegible] to be used for mobilization purposes.

Individual committee members reported on their survey of open fireplaces of the community which could be used for outdoor cooking in case public utilities were destroyed.

Appointed as publicity chairman was Mrs. Robert Meade[illegible], former food editor and columnist for the Cleveland News.

Special to The Star

MARYSVILLE, Sept. 17—An appeal for male workers to help [illegible] the tomato crop was launched here Wednesday by the U. S. employment service seeking workers for the Crampton Canneries at Plain City in the southern section of the county. Many tomatoes are rotting due to lack of help in the cannery, they stated.

In the meantime no time was being lost in lining-up workers in case the appeal fails to produce the needed work. Employment service officials Wednesday conferred with school heads in Marysville, New California, Plain City, Unionville Center and Milford Center relative to obtaining high school boys for a two-week period while the tomato harvest is at its height. They indicated that the schools would be called upon to produce the workers if adult help cannot be obtained.

was brought from Mosul and poured on top of this golden mass, and when the torch was applied, the king himself walked in and laid himself down among his wives —his family—his pet dog—and everything he valued in life. And so the great Ashurbanipal, the richest man in the world, was consumed in his own wealth—he immolated himself and became part of this great conglomerated melted mass of money—and so ended the Empire of the Assyrians. And it never rose again.

I was in Nineveh a few years ago. Only a few mounds marked the spot that was the glory of Ashurbanipal.

Why?

Because Ashurbanipal, who had practically all the money in the world, didn't do anything with it! And he and his country were lost.

Even his conquerors — the Medes and the Persians—made this same mistake—they came, saw, conquered, and confiscated this great golden molten mass of money that was once the king's and the wealth of the great Empire of Assyria—what did they do with it?

Nothing!

They melted it into money again —and remelted it—and in generations since it has been remelted a thousand times—until, believe it or not, it is a mathematical fact that every golden coin used in the world today contains in it some minute particle of Ashurbanipal himself, the king who had all the money in the world but didn't know what to do with it!

What are we going to do with our money today? Enemies threaten us the same as they threatened Ashurbanipal in 626 B. C. The United States of today, like the Assyria of Ashurbanipal, is the richest nation in the world. What will it avail us?

Nothing?

Surely nothing more than it did Ashurbanipal unless we do something with it. And there is only one thing to do—and that is to Buy Bonds and War Stamps and make our money directly available to our country—help our country —otherwise it will become a melted molten mass and we the people will be destroyed as Ashurbanipal was destroyed 2600 years ago.

Cards Beat Boston, Leaving Dodgers Only Long Chance To Win Pennant

Brooklyn Wins a Game, Too, but the Standings Show That Cards Hold Strong Edge Now.

By The Associated Press

FERDINAND the fizzer Gilbert popped out of his hole today, right smack into the National league lawn party, and threw such a scare into the folks in Brooklyn they all but leaped over the garden wall.

Ferdinand the Gilbert, in case you've forgotten him, is the little guy with an adding machine for a head and a percentage table for a heart, and when he starts counting over you—well, pal, it may not be deadly, but it's no vitamin tablet.

And the way Ferdie has it figured out right now, what with the St. Louis Cardinals two games in front of the Bums and moving right along, the layouts look tough for the daffiness boys.

Naturally, you'll point out that the Brooklyns broke out of their hitting slump yesterday with a 16-hit bombardment that tore the feeble Pittsburgh Pirates apart, 10-3, in a game marked by a brawl in the stands among some fans, a couple of ushers and Dixie Walker and Mickey Owen. No one was "hoit."

Cards Beat Boston

But the Cards bowled over Boston's not-so-Braves 6-2 at the same time and are still in there winning.

And those festivities caused Ferdinand to point out that if the Cardinals should even lose four of their remaining nine games, the Dodgers would have to take nine of 11 to win. Or, the Cards can even go under the .500 mark—say win four and lose five—and in that case, the Gowanus Gallants would have to grab eight and lose only three. And if St. Loo should fall completely apart and drop six out of nine, Durocher's darlings still would need seven of 11.

However, the Dodgers are still better than a hundred-to-one shot. Certainly the manner in which they came back yesterday proved that. Dolph Camilli connected for two homers and two singles and knocked five runs and every one in the lineup collected at least one hit to back up Whit Wyatt's steady elbowing.

Meanwhile, the Cards combed Jim Tobin for only nine hits, but they put five of them together for a winning four-run rally in the sixth. Ernie White didn't need much to work on, and for a guy who's been wailing lately about a sore arm, the southpaw looked about as injured as Whirlaway.

Yanks Rout Tigers

The pitching job of the day, however, was turned in by Marv Breuer in twirling the New York Yankees to a 5-1 win over the Detroit Tigers. For seven innings he had a no-hitter and he wound up by giving up only two.

Paul Derringer tossed a four-hitter that gave the Cincinnati Reds a 3-1 decision over the Giants.

The Chicago Cubs climbed over the Pirates into the National league's fifth place by splitting a twin bill with the Phillies, losing the first 3-1 to Johnny Podgajny and taking the nightcap 4-1 behind Hiram Bithorn.

Johnny Niggeling whitewashed the Boston Red Sox with seven hits for a 3-0 St. Louis Browns' victory. Jim Bagby tossed a five hitter for his 15th win as the Indians beat the Senators 5-1, and the Philadelphia Athletics trounced the Chicago White Sox 4-2.

Eastern Army All-Stars Defeat Pro Dodgers, 13-7

By The Associated Press

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17—Col. Robert Reese Neyland's Eastern Army All-Stars headed today towards the toughest of their three games in a nine-day endurance campaign for the army emergency relief fund with a second pro team's scalp at their belts.

The All-Stars staged a fierce fourth quarter comeback last night to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National professional football league, 13-7, before approximately 45,000 persons in Baltimore's municipal stadium.

Then they entrained for Boston, where on Sunday they take on the National league champions, the Chicago Bears.

COLUMBUS, TOLEDO TO MEET IN A. A. PLAYOFF FINALS

Red Birds Edge Blues, 4-3; Mud Hens Defeat Brewers, 1-0.

By The Associated Press

It'll be an all-Ohio playoff in the American association's Governor's cup series starting Friday evening.

The Buckeye state's two entries in the loop—Columbus and Toledo—brought about this turn of events last night when each won their semi-final playoffs for the Governor's cup.

13-Inning Game

Columbus defeated first place Kansas City in the deciding contest of their seven-game series, 4 to 3, in a 13-inning thriller. Toledo eliminated second place Milwaukee in an equally torrid contest, finally winning in the ninth, 1-0. Ewald Pyle pitched one-hit ball to conquer Eddie Hanyzewski, who allowed four. It was the fourth place Mud Hens' third straight victory and gave them a total of four in six games.

The two winners will rest today and then begin their final playoff Friday night at Columbus. Two games will be played at Columbus, George Trautman, president of the league said, with the following three at Toledo. If additional contests are necessary in the best of seven-game series, they will be played at Columbus.

Charley Wensloff, Kansas City's 21-game winner, making his third start of the playoff series, blanked Columbus for six innings and led 3-0 going into the seventh last night. Here the Red Birds got an unearned run, then tied the score in the eighth with two more runs. The winning marker in the thirteenth resulted when Jim Gleason walked, was sacrificed to second, went to third on an infield out and scored on Augie Bergamo's hit to left field.

Allows One Hit

At Toledo, the teams battled scorelessly until Ray Parrott opened the ninth for Toledo with a single. There were runners on first and second when Catcher Charley George muffed Storti's attempted sacrifice. Then Art Keller settled the issue by blasting a 32-2 pitch for a hit to center. Hanyzewski had allowed Toledo but two hits until the ninth.

The only Milwaukee hit off Pyle, a lanky southpaw, was a single in the third inning by George.

This Little Lady's An Exercise Boy

Wide World Features

CAMDEN, N. J.—A 16-year-old high school girl who prefers horses to people, "because they never let you down and they don't answer back," is one of the better exercise "boys" at Garden State Park race track.

She's Shirleye Rose Stanley of Bristol, Pa., owner of a thoroughbred herself and protege of John Slavin, who has been a trainer for 22 years and has horses from a half-dozen stables in his enarge.

A remarkable pairs of legs, stronger than those of most boys, gave Shirleye her chance to get into the work she loves. She developed them by toe dancing and ice skating while recovering from the effects of asthmatic croup in childhood.

Up Betimes

The day starts at 5:45 a. m., when she leaves for the track with neighbors who give her a lift part way. She works all morning, attends the races in the afternoon, and arrives home about 8:30 p. m.

Her first business of the day is a gallop on Steel Ship, her brown mare and one of her two constant companions at the track. The other member of the triumvirate is Fellow, a brown collie-like mongrel. Shirleye says there's complete understanding among the three of them. She calls Steel Ship Mommie.

Trainer Slavin says he likes to have Shirleye exercise his horses because "she's so intelligent and knows just what to tell me when she returns."

Born With The Touch

"She was born with something in her hands, her touch, I guess," he continued. "It makes her a success with horses. You either have it or you haven't."

Shirvele will follow in the footsteps of the man who introduced her to horses, Dr. Edward J. Laing, Bristol veterinarian, and study veterinary medicine in college after she completes her high school studies in another year.

She has ridden Dr. Laing's horses in shows throughout the east for several years; has followed the vets on his rounds, and has assisted him in performing operations.

Shirleye first met Dr. Laing when she took a kitten to him for treatment. He bought her a pony after telling her mother a girl with such strong legs should make a good rider.

Her father followed suit by buying her a jumper, and it wasn't long before Shirleye became a horse enthusiast for life.

By defeating Angelo in last week's main-go match, Bloomfield cleared up the final record. Previously Angelo had won a disputed decision over Bloomfield. Before joining the grunt and groan league Bloomfield served several terms in the U. S. navy and for three years held the navy wrestling belt.

Angelo protested vigorously over a referee's decision after losing to Bloomfield last week. In the locker rooms after the match he declared that Referee Fishbaugh, not Bloomfield, beat him. Because of this Fishbaugh [illegible] to book Angelo with a new [illegible]

Cards Limit Sale Of World Series Tickets

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17—Figuring on a brisk demand for world series tickets if they win the National league pennant, the Cardinals have established a two-to-the-customer limit for reserved seats. Mail applications for grandstand seats will be accepted beginning today, but none will be made for more than two blocks of tickets. As usual, tickets will be sold only in blocks of three, covering the three games to be played here. All box seats already have been sold to holders of season boxes.

Automobile races, because of the more imperative war need for tires and gas, are no longer held in Europe. Even bicycle racing—popular in nearly every European country—has been affected by the rubber shortage, as has tennis. Golf balls are scarce—the game is eyed askance as being too much of an Anglo-American sport—and besides, the ground is urgently needed for potatoes.

"Sports Month"

How popular sports are in Europe can be spotted from a partial list of events scheduled for July, described as "International Sports Month." The list included a rowing regatta in Vienna, bicycle race in Breslau between Germany and Hungary, women's tennis in Berlin, sailing races in Berlin and Trieste, bicycle races in Vienna, an international swimming festival at Hanover, German-Bulgarian soccer match at Sofia, wrestling matches between Germany and Italy at Rome.

Most popular of European sports is soccer.

Heinrich Menzel, head of the Nazi sports training department, recently told sports leaders that "older people must be given a chance to participate to as old an age as possible."

Partly because of this attitude and also because many of the younger players have been called to the front, retired athletes have returned to competition. In German soccer Tull Harder, 0, has become a mainstay of the Berlin team.

One of the most badly war-affected sports in Germany is tennis. Most of the country's top-flight players have been called to the front. The game in Germany now is played mostly by girls. In the national championship matches only six men participated and Germany had to retire from the Rome cup matches because it was unable to muster an adequate team.

Big betting sport in Germany today is horse racing, supervised by the government, which takes a 16 per cent cut. Betting on a big day in Berlin may total half a million marks — with nearly everybody in on it—both those who can pay as much as 20 marks for a ticket and the charwomen who pool their 50 pfennings with the hope of winning a hatful of money.

Bicycle racing, very popular in Italy, has suffered a setback because of tire scarcity. In the 3,820 kilometer tour of Spain bicycle race, won by the Spaniard Berendero, an Italian, Brandilla, took second.

Government Profits

Horseracing is almost as popular as the lottery in Italy for betting. The government takes 35 per cent.

Hockey is winning favor in Italy, notably at Milan; but the Italians are unable to compete with the Swiss, who recently trimmed them, 15 to 0.

Sport sidelight in Italy is the zeal with which Fascist authorities are endeavoring to Latinize names and terms. Boxing is now called "pugilato," football has become "gioco del calcio," hockey—a stickler—"echei," tennis "palscorda," but most Italians, when they get excited, forget to shout the prescribed "sports," and usually cry "goal."

Bicycle Event

One of the most attractive sporting events—considering the 16,500 Swiss francs posted for first prize—was the annual bicycle tour of Switzerland, July 29 to Aug. 2, covering 1,170 kilometers.

The tour of France, which was in sixteen stages, started Aug. 20 in Paris and ended Sept. 6, also in Paris.

Tennis championships for France were held in Paris this year on a reduced scale with the French tennis association asking permission to allow four and five-set matches in an effort to save wear and tear on the balls.

The "grand prix de Paris," once a classical European sprint event, was held July 5, won by Arie Van Vliet, Dutch champion.

World Records

New world records announced recently by the European press included: Twenty kilometer indoor walk, 1.32.28, set by the Swede, John Mikaelsson. Women's javelin, 47.2 meters, set by Fraulein Steinheuer, beating the former record of 46.74 held by the American van Gindele. Women's swimming records, breast-stroke for 200 meters, 2.55.5; 400 meters 6.06.2 and 500 meters 7.43.4, all by the German, Anni Kapell, set last year, but just recognized by the international swimming society.

THE CARDS HAVE A HEXER

DOC WEAVER putting the "whammy" on the enemy.

Doc Weaver, Cardinals' trainer who mothers the players like a hen mothers her chicks, is a great believer in the hex.

Last year Doc had red and green lights rigged up in the Cardinal dugout. When the opposing team, especially the Dodgers, went up to bat, he turned on the red light. When the Cards came to bat he would turn on the green light.

This year he has taken to holding two fingers out in front of him and pointing asp-like toward the opposing player he wishes to hex. He calls it a "whammy."

SNATCHES OF SPORTS

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Wide World Sports Columnist

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—Instead of punishing those unruly spectators, maybe Brooklyn should give 'em a vote of thanks...The Dodgers hadn't shown as much fight in weeks as they did in that pre-game brawl yesterday, and did you notice how they started hitting right afterward? ...If they can only stay mad now, they may still beat out the Cards...Dixie Walker only got credit for four hits, but that wasn't a bunt he hung on that fan's jaw...Looks as if the Phils are the real beneficiaries of the close race. They drew 26,874 for the Cards series and will cut in on five games at Ebbets field, including a Sunday doubleheader, as well as two home games against Brooklyn...Ordinarily at this stage they'd have about 360 fans rattling around in the park.

• • •

Sensible Solution—When Johnny Stojack, star back at Wells High in Steubenville, O., was charged with accepting pay for playing sandlot baseball during the summer, H. R. Townsend, head of the Ohio State Athletic association, ruled that Stojack could regain his eligibility by paying back any money he received for ball playing...He decided that Johnny had compromised himself innocently and that the steel company on whose team he played didn't know it was getting a grid star into trouble.

• • •

Today's Guest Star—Jimmie Murphy, Canton, Ill., Daily Ledger: "So Leo Durocher is going to join the navy! If the Dodgers fail to win the National league pennant, he'd better ask to be assigned to submarine service...Or most any place other than the Brooklyn navy yard."

Emery "Ice Water" Nix One of Bright Spots on T. C. U. Football Squad

Coach Meyer Calls Cool-Headed Player One of Greatest Sophomore Quarterbacks in Years.

By The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Tex. — When Coach Leo Meyer of Texas Christian university gets ice water it's not that the throat is dry.

He's beckoning a chunky, blond fellow who wouldn't get excited in an earthquake.

Texas can tell you all about Emery Nix. He's the guy who passed the great Longhorn team of 1941 out of the Southwest conference football picture. Around the T. C. U. campus they call him ice water because he has something like that coursing through his veins.

And on his steady headwork and mechanical passing arm rest the hopes of the Horned Frogs in this year's conference aviation race.

Meyer names Nix as one of the greatest quarterbacks as a sophomore he ever had. Before Nix were such guys as Sammy Baugh and Davey O'Brien, so you see what kind of praise the coach is passing out.

The Corpus Christi, Tex., product heads fourteen lettermen into conference battle for T. C. U. There would have been seventeen but two were lost to the armed services and another won't play again because of a back injury that required an operation to correct.

But T. C. U. still must be figured among the top contenders for the championship—that is, if Meyer doesn't have to dig too deeply into his reserves.

The starting team will be big—a line averaging 205 pounds, a backfield of 192. Nix is the smallest of the lot. He weighs 175.

T. C. U.'s running game is due to be stronger this year and there are eight lettermen to see that it is.

Kirk, big John Bond, Van Hall and Joe Rogers are the starting quartet while the seat here is Dean Bradley, whose runs broke Texas' heart last fall. Other lettermen are Bomber Montgomery, Bob McCallum and Charley Conway.

T. C. U.'s schedule: Sept. 19—U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles; Oct. 3—Arkansas at Fort Worth; Oct. 10—Kansas at Fort Worth; Oct. 17—Texas A. & M. at College Station; Oct. 24—Pensacola Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla.; Oct. 31—Baylor at Fort Worth; Nov. 7—Texas Tech at Lubbock; Nov. 14—Texas at Fort Worth; Nov. 21—Rice at Houston; Nov. 28—Southern Methodist at Dallas.

LEND-LEASE BUYING OF MEAT SLUMPS

Purchases Cut Down in Face of Shortage. .

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—Purchases of meat by the agricultural marketing administration, government agency which buys for lend-lease shipment to other United Nations, have slumped sharply over the past several weeks, a compilation of department of agriculture reports showed today.

Scaling down of the agency's buying was a necessary result of the meat shortage, livestock experts said. The AMA, which formerly made heavy purchases weekly, now buys only every other week in an effort to make more supplies available for domestic consumers.

Actual shipments and supplies of AMA-purchased meat are a military secret.

At the time the meat shortage came to a head, there was much criticism of continued heavy buying by the AMA during the summer months of slack production. It was argued that the agency could reduce its buying, utilizing stocks it presumably had on hand for lend-lease export.

Livestock experts expect AMA's buying to expand within a few months with the start of the autumn and winter run of hogs and cattle, which will be exceptionally large.

Prices of hogs, which are more influenced by AMA buying than cattle, have declined recently, but livestock men attribute the slump more to the threat of ceilings and increased offerings than to the AMA's program. The top price of hogs yesterday was $14.40 compared with $15.30, a 22-year peak, in mid-August.

Senator Renews Effort To Lower Draft Age

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—Senator Gurney (R-S.D.), undaunted by rebuff in the senate military affairs committee, today renewed his proposal that young men of 18 and 19 be drafted immediately for military training.

The committee yesterday pigeon-holed the proposal until after it receives formal recommendations from the war department, which has had the lower draft ages under consideration for some time.

"Let's give these boys a chance," Gurney said in a statement. "Let them have a year, two or even three years of training before they must fight. To do so increases their chances of survival by at least 50 per cent and increases our chances of success from a big question mark to a certainty.

"If we are going to need these young men in 1943, we need them even more today," he declared. "If, as the President says, the army cannot accommodate them until after the passage of a few months, then let the army expand and make room for them."

Navy Dept. Cancels Marietta Project

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—The navy department has cancelled completely the projected expansion of the Marietta Shipbuilding Corp. at Point Pleasant, W. Va., officials said today.

The expansion program, for construction of a certain type of naval auxiliary vessel, had been partly completed.

The navy has decided to discontinue construction of that type of craft in order to use labor and critical materials in construction of more urgently needed vessels.

The President's Heroes

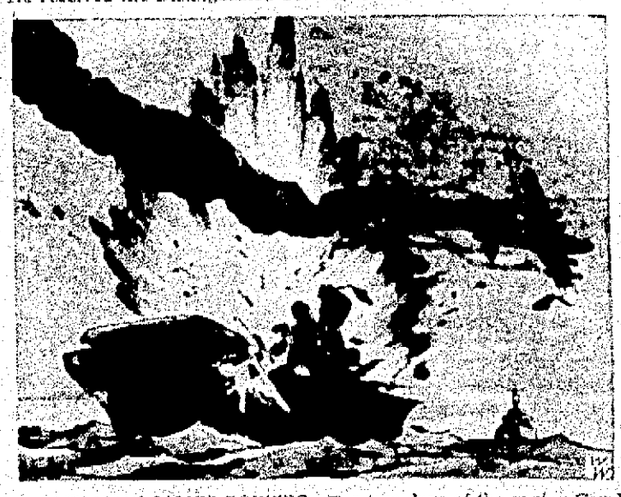
Wide World Features.

From Manila to Dieppe, the war thus far has produced scores of American heroes—some of them unsung, undecorated. So outstanding, however, were the performances of three men that they received public citation from President Roosevelt in his talks to the nation. Here they are, the "President's Heroes":

LT. COMDR. CORYDON M. WASSELL—This 60-year-old ex-missionary went into action in the Java Sea battle, cared for wounded officers and men from the cruisers Houston and Marblehead. Risking capture, he remained on Java with a dozen seriously wounded sailors, finally got them aboard a Dutch ship and directed its passage to Australia. He was awarded the Navy Cross.

CAPT. HEWITT T. WHELESS—On a bombing mission in the Philippine area, Capt. Wheless' ship lost contact with the formation and ran into a nest of Japanese Zero fighters. The bomber attacked its target, engaged the Zeroes and despite the loss of three crewmen, downed 11 enemy planes, then returned safely to base. He received the Distinguished Service Cross.



LT. JOHN JAMES POWERS—For two days of the raging Coral Sea battle, Lt. Powers dive-bombed enemy ships including an aircraft carrier, transport, aircraft tender and gunboats. On the third day, "for the folks back home," he battled though anti-aircraft fire and scored on a carrier at low level. His plane was destroyed by the explosion of his bomb. He was awarded the Medal of Honor.

H. J. Utter of Near Cardington Dies

CARDINGTON, O., Sept. 17—Henry J. Utter, 79, a farmer, died last night at 6:30 in his home three miles southwest of here following a heart attack last weekend. Mr. Utter was born in Westfield township on Nov. 17, 1862 to James and Melissa Nichols Utter. Last July 25 he and his wife observed their golden wedding anniversary. Surviving with the widow, Mrs. Alice Payne Utter, are three children, Mrs. Wesley Geckley of near Marion, Mrs. Cecil Jones of Cardington and Lyman Utter of Galion, four grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a sister, Mrs. Joseph May of Caledonia. The funeral will be conducted Saturday at 2:30 p. m. in the Curl funeral home. Burial will be made in Glendale cemetery. Friends may call at the home until 12:30 p. m. Saturday.

H. A. McKENZIE DIES

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17 — A heart ailment caused the death last night of Harry Alexander McKenzie, 70, former secretary of the state sinking fund commission. He retired from a position in the secretary of state's office two weeks ago. He once was publisher of the Waverly (O.) News.

EAGLES HEAR JOHN A. ABEL

Patriotic Address Is Given by National Secretary at Marion Meeting.

An audience of approximately 200 local and visiting Eagles heard a patriotic message by John A. Abel of Kansas City, Mo., national secretary of the Eagles lodge and a former secretary of the local lodge, at a meeting of Buckeye Aerie No. 557, last night. Thirteen applications were received.

Music included selections by the Buckeye quartet composed of A. A. Ward, J. P. McAndrew, Robert Heimlich and Warren Augenstein, accompanied by Paul Malloy, and a bass solo, "O'er the Billowy Sea," by Mr. Heimlich. A lunch followed the program.

Cites War Duties

Mr. Abel told his audience "the 'must' that we as Eagles and as Americans face is the winning of the war." He stated that 30,000 members already are in service and thousands more are ready to follow. Hundreds of thousands are in factories and others are busy forming blood donor clubs, organizing first aid units, cooperating with civilian defense agencies and service organizations and launching drives to boost war bond sales in their communities, he pointed out. The women, he said, are busy putting up victory packages for our boys, and aeries have already invested five million dollars in war bonds, which they expect to double before the end of the war.

The road to victory, he said, is work and sacrifice. "Our enemies are winning precisely because their people on the home front have been tightening their belts during these many years," he said. "German sacrifices built Hitler's war machine and keep it rolling. The Jap's shrinking bowl of rice built Hirohito's war machine.

Victory Formula

"George Washington himself gave us the formula for victory many, many years ago. During the Revolutionary war, Washington, while riding along a country road in New York, passed a thriving field of corn where three boys were busy at work. Washington remarked about the well-kept farmhouse in the distance, the fertile fields, the mended fences. One boy threw his shoulders back, flung up his head proudly, and said: 'Father's fighting, we're digging, and mother's praying.' 'Fighting, digging, and praying!' exclaimed Washington. 'That's the patriotism that will bring the country out of her distress.'

LIST HIGH SALARIES IN TREASURY REPORT

Movie, Steel, Tobacco and Soap Industries Lead.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 — Presidents of movie, machines, steel, tobacco and soap industries lead the United States treasury's select list of persons paid over $75,000 a year.

The quintet, receiving a total compensation of $2,624,058.52, is led by Louis B. Mayer of Loew's Incorporated whose $704,425.60 salary and bonus for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1941, topped the treasury list announced last night.

In second place was Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corp., with a $1,000,000 salary and "other compensations" of $446,224.26.

Eugene G. Grace had a $130,000 salary and $598,344 bonus as president of Bethlehem Steel Co.; George W. Hill, a $120,000 salary and $328,415.38 bonus as president of the American Tobacco Co., and Francis A. Countway, a $30,000 salary and $408,778.70 bonus as president of Lever Brothers Co.

The list which the treasury is required by law to publish, shows only incomes over $75,000 from corporation salaries, bonuses and commissions. Largest incomes are from other sources, chiefly from investments.

The highest paid movie star was Bing Crosby who was paid $302,314.81 by Paramount pictures, Incorporated, and $150,000 by Universal Pictures Co., incorporated.

Blasts Cement

By The Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Lightning recently struck a tree in the yard of L. D. Rogers' home; peeled the bark away; ran underground five feet and exploded under a cement driveway. Rogers said the cement was blasted as if by a bomb.

Hawaiians claim to have obtained about 15,000 kilograms of platinum in 15 years from the Pearl River deposits, the richest in the world.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

When Eyes Need Special Care

Yesterday we discussed the care of the eyes of the child of school age. For every period of life there are eye conditions that fit only that time. Even before birth certain eye conditions can be prevented by treatment, as pointed out by Dr. Lawrence T. Post of St. Louis. Others can be in part prevented by restricting marriages.

One of these is birth myopia, or near-sightedness, an hereditary defect due to the shape of the eyeball. At least the marriage of two people of extreme myopia should be prevented. But when we remember that failure to do this is responsible for the high incidence of this defect among the Germans today and that the Germans are supposed to be the most scientific people on earth, here is a curious quite needless.

Many eye diseases are become practically non-existent as the result of the enforcement of preventive measures and public health education. Think to carry the age period to just after birth, medical science has practically eliminated "ophthalmia neonatorum," the blindness of the newborn in civilized countries. Whereas not so long ago there were blind asylums crowded with these victims, now the instillation of a weak solution of silver nitrate into the eyes of the child immediately after birth, to kill germs that might have got in during the passage down the birth canal, prevents this condition 100 per cent.

In the young adult period of life also prevention of industrial accidents to the eyes has been a great sight saver—how great we hardly can guess. Poor illumination too has been shown to be responsible for much eye fatigue and this has been largely corrected.

Coming to middle age there are very few people who escape a visit to the eye specialist, for "presbyopia," the blurred vision that results from a hardening and lack of elasticity of the crystalline lens. Perhaps the patient is depressed by this event. "This is the beginning of old age," he says. He jokes about it, but he isn't very happy.

Dr. Post thinks people at about the age of 40 should be prepared for the spectacle epoch, to soften the jar when it comes. There are plenty of good things about the eyes after 50 and this epochal event is relatively unimportant.

The modern man or woman should think also about the blessings that modern optics has given them. Not so long ago the science of spectacle-making was still in its journeyman stage and people from 50 on put up with glasses that gave them any old kind of vision.

Benjamin Franklin among his other practical blessings to humanity invented bifocal spectacles and that was not so long ago.

Samuel Pepys closed his diary because he thought he was going blind, when it was only that he was nearing the age of 40; but in his day spectacles were few and far between, the eye-glass fitting had never been considered by scientific men.

To summarize—for the health of the eyes everyone needs a doctor's attention at the time of his birth, and again between the ages of six and 10 when the demands of school bring out small ocular defects, and then not again as a routine measure unless some bad luck comes along until the age of 40.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

"I'm SURE she won't stay long," I told Ronald. "Then, if you'll go along with Uncle Dicky, he'll show you where your new son is to quarter."

"Just a second," Dicky said as Ronald and Harry started back.

"Your guess was right, Lady Fair," Harry told me, "but you got it first when I told you I'd let one out of the bag. You must have turned in the wrong key, Ronald. I really do have triplets."

"My fingers is out now," my patient said. I ordered it be would ever get to the point.

"Let's get out of the cooing pen," he said. "Just regards to pat out some cabbage now and days right. See that the guard the and a young woman may be here must go out until we're good last than a quarter of an hour, and that is was to say nothing to anyone else, even if questioned. But I think he was relieved to have me take the decision out of his hands. I told him the two women would never get as far as the front steps."

"How about this is your job, Lady Fair?" he said, his hand on my shoulder.

"I don't want Lil to get as far as that guard and find out I questioned him about her," he said.

"So," Harry went on, "if you can possibly flag her, and make her see reason—"

"I'll see her at once," I said, "but I must see her alone. And Carolyn ought not to stay here any longer."

"Of course she mustn't stay," Ronald groaned. "Oh, God! to think my little sister—"

"Don't take it so much to heart, lad!" Dicky said. "She's simply wound up in a melodramatic mesh, and it will take some time to get her untangled. Come on down stairs with me to guard the doors, and put everything else out of your mind. I suppose you will want old Harry up here?" he finished, turning to me.

"Indeed, yes," I answered, "if he can stay up here."

"Then we'll beat it downstairs," Dicky said. "If you need us to give a yell, and we'll flash you an S.O.S. If we have to have any assistance. I'd like to have the special job of—Never mind; come along Ronald."

I knew the sentence he had so abruptly checked would have been, "I'd like to have the special job of third-degreeing Little Carol."

As he and Ronald went down the stairs I turned to Miss Whitlock.

"I'm going to ask Mrs. Dodsworth to come stay to see how Carolyn is," I said. "Will you stay in the room and take care of Carolyn?"

"With pleasure," she returned coolly. Then I went to Lillian's door and knocked twice. There was no answer, so I opened the door and went in, Miss Whitlock close behind me.

Carolyn lay about a hundred feet in Lillian's bed made me rush forward to put a hand on my shoulder. Then, despairingly, I turned back to the nurse.

"She's gone," I said. "This is a dummy."

The Stars Say—

For Friday, Sept. 18

DIFFICULTY and confusion may prevail on this day, although it may be particularly lively and intriguing. There may be peculiar problems or erratic and unpredictable situations to unravel, by clear thinking, deliberate and decisive action and not tempest, turbulence and impetuosity. Avoid excitement, rash and violent scenes and passionate behavior; don't be swept off the balance by sudden and singular situations. The social, domestic, and emotional life as well as business interests are involved.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of excitement, strange and intriguing situations to baffle the good judgment and decisive and self-contained behavior. Clamor, violent, impetuous and wild actions may defeat the possibility of benefit, gain and self-satisfaction. All this may affect the business as well as the private and emotional affiliations.

A child born on this day may have some erratic, singular and unfathomable traits of character, although affectionate, sociable and kindly.
